Long Life to Them.
Down Goes Wheat.
As It Pleases.
German-American Deals.

YOU HOPE THAT "THE" YOUNG COUPLE will live many years happily, and everybody knows that you mean Colonel Lindbergh and his wife.

There is happiness in being well-known, and well liked, for good reasons, and young Lindbergh possesses it.

Without exception, the entire world wishes him well.

The price of wheat dropped to 97¼ cents yesterday. Lowest price since 1914. For the Federal Reserve and combined forces of usury to attack stock values makes no difference. Only wicked gamblers buy stocks.

But the conduct of the Federal Reserve will attract President Hoover's attention, if wheat, cotton and other farm products continue dropping.

It is embarrassing to take office on a "save the farmer" platform and find that your Federal Reserve is hitting the wheat and cotton grower on the head.

An able American banker, who has built for himself a fortune greater than the combined fortunes of all the Federal Reserve gentlemen combined, said yesterday: "Nobody understands the Federal Reserve, what it is doing or what it is trying to do. "It can do about as it d——pleases, and it does as it d——pleases."

That's the situation, briefly.

A combination between the Henry Ford plant in Germany and the great German dye trust, which has hundreds of millions of real money, is interesting and important news in the development of "big business."

Germany needs small, cheap motors. Ford has them.

Ford needs gigantic quantities of paint, in his production of 8000 cars a day. Germany's dye works have the paint.

Thus American and German business are united through Ford and the dye works.

Before this announcement came Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors, had bought the biggest automobile plant in Germany as European agency of General Motors.

Here in America the du Pont Company, biggest owner of General Motors, is a gigantic manufacturer of paint, especially automobile paint.

Thus two great competing American concerns are allied with German concerns in production.

Big business really is getting very big, outgrowing national boundaries.

It takes an hour to send a mail truck from Chicago's central postoffice to the municipal airport at the southwest edge of the city.

The postoffice establishes the world's shortest air mail route, sending mail bags from the postoffice to the lake front, there loading them on an amphibian plane, which flies to the airport in three minutes.

The post office is chiefly responsible for what airplane development we have in this country.

Mexico's congressmen cannot be prosecuted while in office.

But, as the French say: "One can always arrange things."

Fifty-two Mexican congressmen are expelled from office and will now be tried, charged with helping the recent rebellion.

Gloom in Wall Street means gloom elsewhere.

When stocks slump, business in jewelry stores is dull, high priced automobiles sell less rapidly.

There is less demand for accommodations on ocean steamships.

Cotton and wheat have company in their misery, when the unregenerate wicked that buy stocks, expecting them to go up, suddenly find them going down? The Federal Reserve board might have done better for the country if it had been content to attend to its business, allowing the foolish to learn by experience that it doesn't pay to gamble.

Germany is first to develop an intelligent plan for defending cities and other important points against air raids.

Anti-aircraft guns are worthless, compared with artificial fog created chemically by German scientists. It can be used to conceal cities, ammunition warehouses, etc.

With only one or two patches of fog, enemy airmen would know where to drop their bombs.

The plan would be to scatter over the landscape innumerable artificial fog regions, confusing the bombers, making it impossible to select a target with certainty.

A taxicab driver taking a pig for a ride, the pig looking out of the window, attracted attention and a police court fine of $1.

SENTENCE CANTER TO A YEAR

For carrying a placard in front of the State House on which were the words "Fuller, murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti," Harry J. Canter of East Boston today was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction by Judge Robert F. Raymond of Superior Court.

Judge Raymond refused to stay the sentence, and plans were made for the East Boston communist's voyage to Deer Island on the noon boat.

In addition to refusing to stay the sentence, Judge Raymond shut off an attempt of Canter to address the court after his counsel, Harry Hoffman, had spoken in his behalf. While in the midst of his attempt

TRAIL LOST BOY WITH HOUNDS

Calais, Me., May 29 — Bloodhounds were brought here by police today to track a missing 5-year-old boy believed lost in the wooded mountains or drowned in some stream.

The boy is Edwin Edgerly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Edgerly of West Princeton, who became separated from his younger brother, Franklin, 4, while strolling in the woods.

Fear that the boy may have been drowned was expressed by the father, who found the younger boy after hours of searching. When asked by his father where his brother was, Franklin said he was "covered up in the water asleep."

Capt. Wiley of Gardner and his two bloodhounds arrived here today and joined police in the search.

WILLEBRANDT POST FOR MAN

Washington, May 29 (AP)—President Hoover probably will defer selection of a successor to Mabel Walker Willebrandt as assistant attorney-general until about the time she leaves the government service on June 15.

While Mr. Hoover has nothing to say, the general impression in administration circles seems to be that a man will be appointed to succeed her.

HARVARD DEATH PUZZLE GROWS

Mrs. Pennington Satterthwaite of Short Hills, N. J., mother of the Harvard freshman found dead in his dormitory room with a chloroform-saturated cloth over his face, collapsed today when she viewed the body of her son at a Cambridge undertaking establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. Satterthwaite and a young man believed to be the brother of Russell P. Satterthwaite, victim of the mysterious chloroform, reached Cambridge today, firm in their belief that the young student was the victim of foul play or an accident.

Medical Examiner David C. Low conducted the family to the dead youth's bier where the mother collapsed and became hysterical.

Although Pennington Satterthwaite, previously had expressed

NEW DEATH HEAT FELLED 3 BY HEAT

Death took its second victim in the heat wave today as the bubbling mercury reached up toward a new record for the date in Boston.

Boston official temperature reached 92.5 at 3:30 p. m. today, passing yesterday's maximum and needing but five points of it more to equal the 50-year record for the date in the history of the local weather bureau.

Three cases of prostrations were reported in Boston hospitals today.

Thousands swarmed to the beaches, migrated to dancepavilions, sought the cool spots in the stifling weather, fanned, studied his maps, forecast a continuance of the hot spell until tomorrow night at least.

BEACHES ARE CROWDED.

"Fair tonight and Thursday, continued warm, with light winds, southwest to west," was the official prediction that turned the key in thousands of Greater Boston homes and sent traffic rolling endlessly out of the city to cooler spots.

The second victim of the heat was Arthur C. Goodwin, who died today in his room in Stanford st., West End. The first fatality was that of an unidentified man whose body was found yesterday in the Chinese dump.

The first prostration of the day

LIGHTING BILL IN DEADLOCK

The House today refused to agree to the nullifying amendments loaded upon the municipal lighting bill by the Senate. The vote of the lower branch was practically unanimous.

Representative Brainard, one of the backers of the bill which previously passed the House without a dissenting vote, moved that a committee on conference be appointed.

Representative Pratt of Saugus declared he "wondered if this was merely another case where the Senate was going to kill a good measure passed by the House, by letting it die between the branches." He preferred, he said, to seeing the House kill the bill outright.

SECRECY IN FIN. COM. BORING

Contractors working under the direction of the Finance Commission today bored several holes in the cement floor of the Hyde Park high school boiler room in search of a steel foundation beam called for in the specifications.

Whether the boring resulted in discovery of the beam could not be learned definitely. James Myrick, member of the Schoolhouse Commission, said he was told the beam was found and that 10 inches of concrete foundation, instead of the eight inches called for in the specifications, was discovered.

Guy Emerson, consulting engineer of the Finance Commission, which has been investigating the Hyde Park school project for many weeks, would not state what the boring, accomplished with compressed air drills, had disclosed.

Shortly after two workers employed by the contracting company engaged by the Finance Commission began their drilling, it became apparent that the investigating body was also interested in the floor laid. Cement dust tossed up by the drills was placed in envelopes for later analysis.

The boring has resulted in conflict of opinion as to what particular body at present controls the Hyde Park school which was accepted by the Schoolhouse Commission on Feb. 7. But whether control has passed from the schoolhouse department into the hands of the school committee effected not in the least the plans of the Finance Commission, which asked no permission to institute the beam search, beginning the work at once after notifying both bodies of its intention.

Only Awning on City Hall Annex Burns Up

SENATE KILLS 'L' REFERENDUM

The Senate today voted down by 26 to 9 a provision for a referendum on public or private ownership of the Boston Elevated.

This action left before the Senate the bill which it received from the House, calling for a return of the road to private hands.

Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., of Boston, voted against the referendum because he said it was a contradiction in terms, but he joined other influential members of the Legislature by taking a stand for public ownership.

Parkman said the public would not get needed extensions of service under private ownership. He pointed out that in the present measure, the State retains and must retain its option to purchase within two years.

President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Senate took the floor and offered an amendment providing for rapid transit extensions immediately, these to be made when accepted by the directors of the company, the trustees of the proposed new transit board and the metropolitan council composed of city and town executives.

FATHER IN COLLAPSE AT NEWS

Submerged in an overflowing bathtub, the body of Miss Virginia Robinson, 22-year-old Winchester artist and heiress, was found today in the home of her brother at Winnetka, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, according to a despatch from that city.

The body was found by the girl's sister-in-law, Mrs. Helene Robinson, when she investigated the reason for water leaking through the ceiling beneath the bathroom.

Water was running from both open faucets about the bathtub and the body was entirely beneath the surface.

The girl, a daughter of Willard E. Robinson of 25 Cambridge st., Winchester, head of a large Cambridge spring water and beverage company, left Boston on May 9 for a month's visit at the Winnetka home of her brother, Ward Robinson.

According to her father and friends, Miss Robinson was apparently in perfect health when she left for Chicago.

She was graduated last June from the Carbee Scott Art school at 126 Massachusetts ave., Back Bay, where she had completed the advanced painting course.

The father was overcome today at his Winchester home when he received the tragic news of his daughter's death.

In addition to the brother at whose home she died, Miss Robinson is survived by another brother and two sisters.

the opinion that his son was a victim of murder, neither he nor other members of the family could aid police in developing this theory.

Medical Examiner Dow is still undetermined as to the cause of death and it is believed an autopsy will be held before the body is returned to New Jersey.

POLICE INVESTIGATE

Police investigation, led by Capt. John J. Powers, continued today along the theory that some person may have stolen into the Gore Hall room where young Satterthwaite lived and ended his life.

Harvard University officials are inclined to believe that the student committed suicide.

Coming so soon after the still unexplained mystery death of Walter Treadway Huntington, Harvard junior, who was found dead with a bullet in his head in a field near Windsor, Conn., the latest mystery was a shock to Harvard authorities. Satterthwaite's body was found by a classmate whose name is being withheld. Alarmed at receiving no reply to his lusty knocks, the student broke a window in the room, and entered.

The room, though located on the fourth floor of Gore Hall, is readily accessible by way of a two or three-foot-wide pedimest which runs around the building at this level.

Dr. Dow, who was called immediately by the Harvard authorities, and Alfred Chester Hanford, dean of Harvard College, were the first to enter the room, except for the student who broke his way in and for the maid, who appealed to the student for aid when she was unable to get into the room to do her daily tasks.

PUZZLED FOR MOTIVE

Both Dean Hanford, who issued, through the Harvard College information bureau, a short statement, and Dr. Dow, who with the dean searched the room, declared that they have been unable to find any note or anything else suggestive of a motive for suicide.

Dean Hanford's statement on the death reads as follows:

"Russell Peshard Satterthwaite, a freshman in Harvard College; was found dead in his room, Gore Hall, R. 45, shortly after noon today, Tuesday, May 28. Medical Examiner Dow of 1597 Massachusetts ave. was called and declared that it was his belief it was a case of suicide. Death was caused by inhaling chloroform.

"Satterthwaite came from Short Hills, N. J. He graduated from Harvard at Phillips Exeter Academy. His father, Pennington Satterth Waite, is an architect.

"No motive for the suicide has been found. Satterthwaite was a good student and his standing at Harvard is highly satisfactory. He roomed alone."

Dr. Dow stated that he had been called down to Gore Hall at 2 o'clock. He stated that he found the body fully clothed lying on the bed in the bed room. One window of the room was broken, presumably by the student who entered, but the air was still thick with the smell of chloroform. Dr. Dow said he had contained that liquid was also found. The door had been locked from the inside.

Satterthwaite, in the opinion of Dr. Dow had been dead several hours. More specific as to time, the Cambridge medical examiner declined to be, averring that anything more specific in such a case would be "mere guesswork."

Dr. Dow further stated it as his opinion that Satterthwaite would have had great difficulty in getting chloroform at a drug store without an adequate explanation. The Cambridge Medical examiner, however, suggested the possibility of its having been secured, perhaps surreptitiously from some chemical laboratory, perhaps at Harvard.

Among Satterthwaite's personal belongings were found a letter from his father, of very recent date, which according to Dr. Dow, dealt with the pleasure Satterthwite's mother had when she visited her son in Cambridge two weeks ago.

Satterthwaite, as far as Dr. Dow could judge, was in good health. No autopsy has been performed, nor is one likely to be at present.

WAS PESSIMISTIC

From friends of the dead boy, however, it was learned that Satterthwaite "was inclined to be pessimistic." He appears not to have mixed well, roomed alone, and despite his connections with Exeter which sends a large delegation to Harvard annually, seemed to have few intimate friends.

Dr. Dow remarked that the decorations of the student's room, for the most part wood cuts and etchings, were of a nature more somber than would be expected to appeal to an average freshman.

WORLD PEACE STILL REMOTE, SAYS DANIELS

Buffalo, N. Y., May 29 (AP)—Because the two great English-speaking nations of the world are "bound hand and foot to stupid worship of two archaic shibboleths" world peace is as far from realization at ever, Joseph Daniels, secretary of the navy under President Wilson, declared today in addressing Buffalo's Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

"We have the spectacle of Britain tied to the body of death in its slavish belief in the outgrown slogan, 'Mistress of the Seas,' and the United States equally chained to the corpse of the fettering parochial slogan, 'No Entangling Alliances,'" he said.

Just as long as these nations cling to these beliefs, in his opinion, will the Geneva conference and all other conferences "fall of their high and holy aim."

"If the winner of the race in Britain tomorrow," he said, "will summon Parliament and the people and say: 'The time has come for this nation to free itself from the feeling that it is Neptune, and join with other powers to secure and assure safety to every ship of every nation on the high seas'—the moment England does not shiver at the thought that some other nation may have equal seagoing tonnage, its people will be free from fear and boasting."

Mr. Daniels said the United States did well to heed Washington's and Jefferson's warnings against "entangling alliances" in the early days of the country and in 1813, but that the situation was entirely changed today.

Winchester Power Rate Is Protested

Charging that the rates charged by the Edison Electric Co. for current supplied to schoolhouse ventilating systems are "excessive, unfair and discriminating," the selectmen of Winchester have appealed to the State for relief.

The complaint says that the company is charging Winchester more for the service than is charged by other companies in other towns, and that the system of charging the town the same rate for the ventilator power as is charged for lighting is unfair.

"The town maintains eight public schoolhouses," the complaint says, "which are required by law to be ventilated. These buildings have been equipped at great expense with ventilating systems whereby fresh air is circulated and foul air is expelled by means of fans or blowers. The electricity necessary for the operation of these motors is furnished by the company upon which the town is wholly dependent therefor.

FRIENDS AIDING LINDBERGHS IN HIDING

New York, May 29 (INS)—With public fancy and unconfirmed rumor continuing to place them in any one of a score of spots in as many parts of the United States, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride remained definitely among the missing today.

By some masterpiece of strategy, in which dozens of willing friends pledged to secrecy, apparently acted, the colonel and his bride have seemingly attained the supreme wish of all honeymooners—seclusion from the world's prying eyes.

Although all those concerned, including the family of Dwight W. Morrow, American ambassador to Mexico and father of the bride, continued to deny all knowledge of their whereabouts, there were definite indications today that to some persons at least the disappearance of Lindy and Anne is not so very much of a mystery.

A close personal friend of the flier and his bride said, "You can put them anywhere you want to."

And the tone of his voice indicated the unspoken addition:

"Because you won't be able to find 'them, anyway."

Close Watch Kept for Lindy at Schenectady

Schenectady, May 29 (INS)—Sharp watch was being kept at the Schenectady airport today for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride, the former Anne Spencer Morrow.

Lindbergh's blue and yellow Curtiss Falcon plane, fuelled for a flight of 1000 miles, is in a hangar. There were reports here that the Lindberghs might appear at any moment and start on an aerial honeymoon.

The plans arrived at the airport yesterday afternoon, piloted by Randy Emslie, a close friend of the Lone Eagle. Paul Stephenson, a student flier, was a passenger.

CANTER GOING TO JAIL FOR YEAR to speak, Canter was led away by two court officers.

In addressing the court, Atty. Hoffman said he would like to have Canter's sentence stayed pending an appeal to the Supreme court. "The brief is now being prepared and I hope to have it completed by tomorrow," said Hoffman.

After Judge Raymond refused a stay Canter arose from his chair just outside the bar enclosure railing and said: "I'd like to say a few words, Your Honor."

Judge Raymond replied: "Your counsel has represented you both ably and thoroughly."

Canter replied: "I have said less in this case than anyone else." He then raised his right hand and was in the midst of another sentence when two court officers marched him away to the detention pen.

In passing sentence Judge Raymond said: "Unfortunately a good deal of attention is paid to cases of this type and in many instances the blood becomes overheated. I dislike to make remarks when passing sentence on anyone, but I am inclined to in this case because of a remark made by Canter to the officer who arrested him. Canter said to the officer at the time of arrest 'The laws are not made for working men.' Literally, I agree with him. Neither are they made for rich men. The law is made for all men."

ANOTHER DEAD AS HOT WAVE KEEPS ON

was Tony Sorello of Broadway, Chelsea. He collapsed at work in Auburn st., West End.

Every beach along the Massachusetts coastline had its share of bathers today, but the largest crowds were present at Revere Beach, Nantasket and at L st., South Boston.

Nantasket roads were trafficchoked as seldom before so early in the season. Metropolitan police estimated that by 10 a. m. 2000 bathers were in the surf. Everything at Nantasket was open—except the metropolitan bathhouses, where hundreds of disappointed would-be bathers congregated.

CROWD AT REVERE

At Revere 18 additional men were placed on traffic duty by the metropolitan police and plans were made to close the beach front-ward to all cars at sundown.

Under ordinary conditions the comfort-seekers, out in automobile armies, would have been enough to tax the traffic forces of every Greater Boston and resort police department. Added to the motorists bound on escaping the heat, however, were thousands headed for distant points for Memorial Day services.

Not all of this traffic, by any means, rolled over the smooth macadam highways. The Boston & Maine, the New Haven and the Boston & Albany Railroads carried thousands of holiday travelers, the result being that North and South Stations, as the day wore on, housed ever-changing capacity crowds.

As the mercury lifted to the 92 mark, it became apparent that all weather bureau records for May 29 would be broken. The record stood at 93 in 1919, the next highest reading for the date being 88 in 1911. So, even before noon, with the warmest hours of the day still to come, the reading for this date was the second highest in 59 years.

Yesterday's promise of relief in the shape of a storm from the south dwindled early as the low pressure area took a sudden switch toward South Dakota.

Eastward from the Missouri river valley at noon, a heat blanket extended to the Atlantic coast. In the Rocky mountains, by way of comparison, freezing weather was being experienced and Utah had an average temperature of 30 degrees.

From Nashua, N. H., came report of the day's first two prostrations, one of which may prove fatal.

Louis Jolly, 50, was stricken at his work and rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his condition is serious.

URGE CLUBS TO STUDY POWER

paid in, the distinction between holding companies and operating companies, the concentration of control in the hands of the few by voting powers vested in a small classed group as against the great majority of stockholders; all these are a challenge to our energy and minds today. It is a challenge to you to cultivate an interest, to accept responsibility and to take hold.

"Take an interest in legislation involving a tax program that seeks to equalize the burdens of taxation. Take an interest in legislative work for our unfortunates. The maintenance of institutions and care of our dependents is a fine thing to know if you wish to learn how the other half lives.

"Take an interest in legislative work generally, the determination of the state tax commission of bonded debts and the oversight of appropriations. Also take an interest in the forestry department and in child labor legislation.

TOO MUCH "MAIN STREET"

"Our communities are too drab; there is too much 'Main Street,'" said John Nolen, city planner of Cambridge, in addressing the convention.

"Our towns are ugly—or at least colorless," continued Nolen.

"Can we not recapture something of the beauty of life and build new cities for the new era that will be better than the old?" he asked.

Mr. Nolen declared it is a misconception to believe that community planning as a guide to development is a new source of expense.

"It is really a true economy," said. "Community planning pays. Certain things are indispensable to a city and it is merely a question of when they are obtained. Cities must also choose between one form of expenditure and another.

"Another misconception is that there is a conflict between use and beauty. The choice in community planning is not use or beauty but use and beauty. Every town and city in the United States should have a master plan to guide its growth."

URGES PLAY IN YOUTH

J. C. Faust of the Playground Recreation League of America said:

"In a recent study of 25,000 cases of nervous breakdown between the ages of 40 and 50, made by a large insurance company, it was pointed out that 75 per cent to 80 per cent showed an absence of adequate joyous play life in youth. Recreation is the very foundation of the home is a most potent force for the development of character."

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon - general, United States Public Health Service said:

"Of the 3,000,000 boys and girls there are about 1,000,000 persons incapacitated all the time by illness, much of which is preventable; about 70 per cent of the school children are handicapped by physical defects, most of which are preventable or remediable; about 50 per cent of persons of military age are incapacitated for arduous productive labor or for general military duty, largely for preventable causes and over 60 per cent of the men and women between 40 and 60 years of age are in serious need of physical reparation, largely as a result of preventable ailments.

"In view of these conditions there is no room for remarkable double talk for more and better rural health service in this country."

PLEA FOR INDIANS.

Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith of Dublin, N. H., in addressing the women on the Indian problem, said:

"The condition of orphaned children is pathetic. There is an emergency need for at least 200 additional nurses and 50 more doctors and the construction of at least 25 hospital and sanitariums in various parts of the Indian country.

"There is a marked necessity for social service work, the problem being the same as among all primitive people. There is need for good homes, and the old men and women should be cared for.

"Bad sanitary and health conditions, improper food and lack of personal cleanliness are responsible for tuberculosis and other diseases. Our division should continue to fight for increased funds for liquor suppression on the reservations, which is increasingly disastrous to the health and morals of the Indians."

Hub Police to Don Roll Collar Suits Friday

Boston police will don their new summer uniforms with the roll collars on Friday, Superintendent Crowley announced. The men would have worn the uniforms today but all of them were not ready and only half the members possessed one.

In Newton and Watertown, members of the police departments will don their summer uniforms tomorrow morning. In many of the suburbs the hot wave saw a prompt change from the heavy, stand-up collar police uniform to the lighter and more comfortable summer dress.

SENATE CLEARS WAY TO PASS CENSUS BILL

Washington, May 29—With the amendment to exclude aliens from the 1930 census defeated in the Senate by a 48 to 29 vote, administration leaders are hopeful that a final vote on the census and reapportionment bill may be had without much further delay.

Had the amendment been accepted, it would have killed the hope of congressional reapportionment for another two years and perhaps for a decade.

An amendment by Senator Harrison (D.) of Mississippi, extending the time limit for Congress to make a reapportionment after the next census until 1934, was defeated 52 to 27.

An amendment by Senator Dill (D.) of Washington, to have the census enumerators find out how many radio sets there are in American homes was adopted 63 to 18.

TUNNEY PLANS 'FINISH FIGHT'

Stamford, Ct., May 29 (AP)—Homer S. Cummings, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, announced today that he had been engaged to make an appearance in court at Bridgeport on behalf of Gene Tunney in the $500,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Kathryn King Pougnet of New York.

"The suit will be contested to the limit," Mr. Cummings said. He added that his firm, Cummings & Lockwood, would defend the action for Tunney by arrangement with George W. Whitside of New York, general counsel for the former pugilist. His firm is preparing an answer to the charges of Mrs. Pogarty that Tunney proposed to her and was accepted and then "married another person"—the former Polly Lauder.

Cummings declared this answer need not be filed until June 24, or 26 days after the order to Tunney to appear is made returnable.

Berlin, May 29 (AP)—Mrs. Gene Tunney is progressing normally and her condition is excellent, Prof. Arthur W. Meyer, German specialist, told the Associated Press on arrival from the Island of Brioni today.

OVERSEAS FLIGHTS HELD UP

By ARTHUR QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Old Orchard, Me., May 29—Fifteen minutes after taking off for Paris today, the French monoplane Yellow Bird returned to the beach, forced back by a gas tank leak.

The Green Flash, which was to have started for Rome ahead of the Yellow Bird, got stuck in the sand in starting and was still on the beach when the French plane returned.

Both flights were postponed until tomorrow, the American crew of the Green Flash reluctantly abandoning their intent to start today after the slight breeze died.

With more than 1000 persons filling the beach the Yellow Bird took the air at 9:53:23. The weather was ideal, a five-mile breeze blowing from the south.

TAKES TO THE AIR

The big monoplane, carrying more than 1000 gallons of gasoline and weighing 15,700 pounds loaded, ran approximately a mile down the beach in a southerly direction heading toward the pier, before going into the air.

The start was "heavy," due to the big load. Once in the air, Lotti turned over the water, once touchingn the waves, and the headed into the northeast, gradually gaining altitude.

The Coast Guard plane that was to accompany the transatlantic fliers for three hours followed, as did several other privately owned machines.

At 10:12 the naval radio station at Cape Elizabeth, eight miles east of here, reported that the Yellow Bird has turned back. Watchers on the beach saw it almost immediately afterward and it landed at 10:16, being then wheeled out of the water so that the Green Flash could make another start.

The Green Flash essayed a start a few minutes before the Yellow Bird took off, but the vibration of its motor dug one of the wheels into the sand, so that a wing tipped. It had to be lifted and boards placed under the wheels.

This mishap was very disappointing to the crew, Roger Q. Williams and Lewis Yancey.

DRIVE 90 GALLONS OF GAS

Mrs. Yancey, wife of the navigator of the plane, had hugged and kissed her husband good-bye and turned away, weeping, as he climbed into the cabin. When the start was delayed he climbed out again and rejoined her.

The Yellow Bird had trouble with the stabilizer early in the morning, but this was rectified while the two planes were side by side at the north end of the beach, warming up the motors and making final preparations.

While in the air the French plane dumped 400 gallons of gasoline, at the moment of turning back.

"Texas" Guinan, New York night club hostess, arrived by airplane to witness the start.

Pilot Lotti of the Yellow Bird said:

"I was forced to come back because of a leak in my gas tank. The seam was parted, I believe, by the tremendous vibration o fthe motor. This turn back is a pity. No one can realize how keenly it disturbs me, but after all I, of course, have to consider the safety of the lives of the other two men, Lefevre and Assolant.

DRY AGENT'S TURKISH BATHS LEAD TO RAID

Saco Judge Ill

Judge Webster Thayer, presiding justice in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, is in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital with a slight stomach indisposition.

RUM SERVED WITH RUBS, HE SAYS

Because a federal prohibition agent likes Turkish baths, the owner and an attendant of a bath on Tremont st., near Avery st., appeared before U. S. Commissioner E. C. Jenney today on a charge of having liquor in their possession illegally.

The agent, whose name the authorities are keeping secret, had been patronizing the Tremont st. bath for some time before he discovered that liquor as well as rubs could be purchased there.

He swore to an affidavit that he had made four purchases in the place and a prohibition squad, headed by Dennis T. Lorden, raided the bath.

The squad reported they found 16 quarts of alleged liquor concealed in a hot air register. Israel Novak, the proprietor, was permitted to go on his own recognizance following the hearing, and John Barnicle, an attendant, was held in $500 bail. The case has been continued pending the completion of the investigation.

FLANIGAN WAS ARDENT WOOER, WIFE SAYS

The wooing of Michael Flanagan, 59, and the lone survivor of the Flanagan Band, celebrated musical family of a decade ago, was constant and ardent, according to the testimony of Mrs. Flanagan, 50, the former Mary Leahy of Marlboro, who is contesting the bandman's suit for annulment of his marriage in Middlesex Probate court.

Three or four times a week he visited her at her home following the day of their first meeting in January, 1927, Mrs. Flanagan said. As the courtship progressed through the spring of 1928 he increased his calls until it was not unusual for him to ring her doorbell thrice daily, she said.

Came June of 1928 and with it the second proposal of marriage from Michael, Mrs. Flanagan averred. He popped the question of marriage via the telephone, she said, calling her from Lynn and advising her to come to that city where the ceremony might be performed at less expense than in Marlboro.

Mrs. Flanagan testified that her husband left her in December, 1928, only three months after the marriage. She refuted Flanagan's charge that he was tricked into matrimony by her and her brother Fred and denied that the latter had threatened to attach Flanagan's extensive property holdings in Marlboro unless he consented to wed her.

13-YEAR SUIT FOR $370,330 ENDING

Appointed by United States court as auditor in the case of John Marsch, a Chicago contractor, who seeks $370,330 damages from the Southern New England Railroad for breach of contract, Atty. William G. Thompson today filed his report.

Filing of the report indicates the case, after 13 years of litigation, is nearing an end. It dates to the time that Marsch entered into written agreemen with the railway to build a line from Palmer to Blackstone, in 1912.

When the project was suspended, Marsch sought to recover from the railroad $1,290,851, but this was reduced in an award handed down by a board of arbitration. In November, 1916, Marsch brought suit against the company through Sherman L. Whipple, setting his damages at $3,000,000.

An adverse decision by the Supreme Court led Marsch to have recourse to Federal Court.

ROBBER GANG OF 3 BOYS GET LONG TERMS

Appearing in Lynn district court today, before Judge Reeves, three Lynn youths were sentenced to indefinite terms in Shirley and Lyman schools, and one was held in $1000 for the grand jury. The boys, Richard Stanczyk, 18, of Washington st.; Bernard Corcoran, 17, of South Common st., and Leo Leonard, 16, of Harwood st., were charged with nine counts of breaking and entering and larceny in the night time, and five counts of attempted breaking and entering in the night time.

ENDS ROBBERIES

The Lynn police believe that the recent wave of breaks in stores in Lynn will be ended with the sentencing of the three youths.

Early today Patrolman Henry Wheaton of the Saugus police saw three youths standing on Ballard st., Saugus. He called to them, and one broke into a run.

He caught the other two, and a search revealed about $20 worth of candy in their pockets. Handcuffing them together, and then fastening the wristlets to an awning, he searched the neighborhood for the store from which the candy came.

MOTHER'S STORE ROBBED

Patrolman Wheaton found the store, owned by his mother, with a door jimmied. He went back to where he had left the boys, and found that one of them had wriggled out of the handcuffs and escaped.

Wheaton called the Lynn police, and Sergeant William Murphy and Patrolman Edward Kelley investigated. They found Corcoran in a room on South Common st., and upon grilling, Corcoran broke down and confessed the series of breaks. In the room the police say they found $1200 worth of loot.

Leonard was seen by the officers on Park st. and when he fled at the approach of the police, four shots were fired in the air by the pursuing policemen.

PENSION BILL FOR JUDGES IS KILLED

The House by a roll call vote, 122 to 71 killed the bill increasing the allowances of supreme and superior court judges when retired by the governor and council because of physical or mental disability.

During the lengthy debate, it developed that there are some five justices now who are drawing full pay and unable to give full time service. With a retirement allowance of half pay as an inducement —$6000 for superior court judges, and $7000 for those on the supreme bench—it was argued these judges who are holding up court business could be eliminated.

Rep. Edward Kelley of Worcester, supporting the committee's adverse report, contended that a Legislature which had just refused to give a pension to worthy aged citizens could not consistently favor an increase in the judges' pensions.

Rep. Rafter of Salem protested it was unfair to use the defeat of the non-contributory old-age pension bill as an argument against the judges. The latter, he said, are not responsible for that defeat, and if anyone is to be blamed it is the Legislature.

Favors Trade Board for Textile Probe

Washington, May 29 (INS)—Whether the Senate will send its own investigation committee to investigate wages and working conditions in textile mills, allow the Federal Trade Commission to conduct the inquiry, or conduct an investigation at all, apparently rested with Senator Hatfield (R) of West Virginia today. He indicated he would vote to turn the investigation over to the trade body.

ALLEN SIGNS INDUSTRIAL BOARD BILL

Governor Allen today signed a bill establishing the Massachusetts Industrial Commission to promote industrial, agricultural and recreational progress of the state.

To prominent citizens who witnessed his signature, and who sponsored the legislation, the Governor said:

"It is a great pleasure to sign this measure, because of my firm conviction that the establishment of the commission will result in stimulation of definite economic progress in this Commonwealth.

"It assures the development of comprehensive views of matters affecting our economic progress, makes possible a greater co-ordination of effort on the part of all interests, both private and public, and creates a body through which the power and prestige of government can be brought into co-operation with

"From the first, the committee of the Massachusetts Division of the New England Council has been of the greatest service in behalf of the measure as recommended in my inaugural, both in supporting it yourselves, and in co-ordinating the support of chambers of commerce and other organizations throughout the state.

Finds Plants 'Shoot' More Than Artillery

Washington, May 29 (AP)—The process by which a minute fungus plant shoots more damaging projectiles into the air in an hour than were fired from guns during the whole World War, was described at a special meeting of the Botanical Society of Washington by Dr. A. H. Reginald Buller of the University of Manitoba.

This prolific fungus, he said, is very similar to the organism which causes the smut of wheat, a plant disease which is estimated to cause an annual loss of more than $25,000,000 in the United States alone by destroying the kernels and substituting for them thousands of spores. These spores, too small to see individually but appearing in large number as a fine black powder, act much like a seed, sending out small thread-like tubes on which other spores develop to perpetuate the fungus and the disease.

The exact manner in which these secondary, disease-spreading spores are expelled from the stalks which bear them has been a subject of disagreement and speculation for a long time, Dr. Buller recalled. He and associates, however, have traced the process to its origin, and discovered the mechanism of expulsion.

A small drop of liquid, composed largely of water, he explained, is formed at the base of the spore. It enlarges, he said, until, upon reaching a certain size, the pressure of its surface tension causes the forcible projection of the spores for a distance, sometimes equalling 200 times their length.

BABY IS HURT IN PORCH DROP

Two-year-old Bennett Greenblat had a narrow escape from death when the third-floor piazza of his home at 507 East Seventh st., South Boston, on which he was playing, collapsed, dropping him to the iron spike railing of the floor below. The child was impaled on the spikes.

Neighbors released the child's legs from the spike railing and then took him to Carney hospital. Later he was taken home for further medical attention.

The piazza collapsed when the child's father, Abraham F. Greenblat stepped upon it from his apartment. As the flooring gave way the father saved himself by clutching the iron spike railing which surrounded the top of his own piazza. He was slightly hurt.

Though the agents testified the chase began in Dedham, Lukas told the commissioner that he was driving through Franklin Park when he noticed some men hiding cans in the bushes. Kress, wealthy chain store owner, has given his approval of the runaway marriage of his 17-year-old daughter and Charles L. Abry, Jr., $30-a-week broker's clerk.

The couple eloped two weeks ago to Bel Air, Md., when Abry was a second year student at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. His home is at Ramsay, N. J.

Kress' approval was gained when the bride, Silvia Adelaide Kress, announced her determination to live on her husband's income after her graduation June 4 from a select girls' school at Oaaining. Abry meanwhile will room with a former schoolmate in Brooklyn.

Kress, who is vice-president of H. H. Kress, Inc., said:

"When I found that this young man, whom I scarcely know, was my son-in-law, I felt just like taking a real father to him and taking him out to the woodshed. But, you knew, he is a fine boy. I'm just getting acquainted with him. I like his mettle."

The couple met last September when Miss Kress was bridesmaid at a wedding at which Abry was usher. Last Easter he and a college chum were guests at the Kress home at Oaaining. The couple eloped May 13. Mr. Kress, informed of the impending marriage in a note, made an unsuccessful attempt to halt them.

PITIABLE DRUG ADDICT IN THE TOILS

A living example of the degrading and devastating effects of the drug habit was brought to police headquarters today.

The pitiable figure of Rose Guey, white widow of a Boston Chinaman, but formerly the beautiful Rose Randall, daughter of a respectable family, demonstrated the deadly evil of narcotics better than printed words could portray.

The woman was arrested by Sergt. Robert Caverly and Special Officer Daniel Curran of the narcotic squad in a dingy room of a lodging house in the Chinatown section of Harrison ave.

FIND NEEDLES AND DRUGS

There they also found, stitched in the pillows and mattress of her bed, 80 grains of cocaine, 40 grains of morphine, two hypodermic needles and two syringes.

The officers gained entrance to the room, which was heavily barred, by representing themselves as workers come to repair the gas jets. When the woman realized they were policemen she made a dart for the bed, but the officers forestalled her and found the dope.

Rose has served time in Plymouth jail for peddling narcotics, and has been an addict herself for more than 20 years, according to the police.

LOST HUSBAND AND FRIENDS.

She acquired the habit through smoking opium in forbidden joints in the North End, and finally drifted to Chinatown, where she was married to Edward Guey. Her Chinese husband died three years ago. Since then she has been living alone, forsaken by those whom she had chosen to live among.

She asked police to telephone a rich Chinese merchant to come and bail her out.

"Tell her I'm away," was the laconic answer received over the line.

Rose was taken to the house of detention to await arraignment on the charge of possessing narcotics and drug-using equipment.

$50,000 Spree?

Wanda Hawley, stage and screen star, is charged with breach of contract in a $50,000 suit filed in Los Angeles by Hunter Keasey, author-producer of play "Illegitimate." He says Wanda was so intoxicated on April 24 that it was necessary to stop the show.

TRICK PANEL AID TO HARVARD BURGLAR

Whether a trick panel in the door was pushed back or false keys used in gaining entrance to the apartment of James M. Cosgrove in Drayton Hall, Boylston st., Cambridge, was a question engrossing Cambridge police today.

The apartment occupied by Harvard students was entered by thieves and clothing valued at $100 or more was taken.

Cosgrove, a Harvard student, told the police about the trick panel and showed Special Officer William Nixon, working on the case, how it worked in opening the door from the inside once it had been pushed back by a movement of the hand on a grain in the wood.

The room is one the floor directly above the one occupied by Walter Treadway Huntington, Harvard junior, whose body was found three weeks ago in a field near Windsor, Ct.

WOMAN LEADER LAUDS MRS. HEARST

"The women of the nation owe a great debt to Mrs. Phoebe Hearst for all that she has done to aid the cause of women. Personally, I feel that I am a better woman for having known her."

In these words did Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Austin, Texas, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs from 1912 to 1916 pay tribute to the mother of William Randolph Hearst.

Mrs. Pennypacker was talking informally with the Boston Evening American representative at the biennial convention of the Federation at New Ocean House, Swampscott.

There are few women in the country who are better informed on national and international aspects of social, political and economic problems as they affect women than Mrs. Pennypacker. She was a pioneer worker among Texas women, and a leader in the activities of the women of that State for many years. She has lectured in every state in the Union and in many European countries.

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO

As she had attended the sessions of the League of Nations at Geneva in 1925, 1926 and 1927, she was asked what she though women could accomplish toward a better understanding among the nations of the world.

"Women can do much toward fostering international amity," said Mrs. Pennypacker, "by learning as much as they can about the peoples and problems of other countries.

"We in this country have been too provincial, in a sense, due to the fact that we are separated from Europe by such a great distance. By reading and travel, and by association with those of other countries, however, we can produce a better understanding, which will do much toward international harmony.

"I am in no sense an internationalist, in the meaning that the word is commonly understood. I am an American always. But just as a man who is a good neighbor is likely to be a better husband and father, so I believe that a person who tries to have a better understanding with those of other countries is likely to be a better American citizen.

"Racial and religious barriers can be levelled and the world march on in peace and happiness if only we all would try to understand and sympathize with those of other nations. And I think the women of the Federation are doing much along this line."

Mrs. Pennypacker was then asked what she considered to be the immediate and paramount duty of the women of this country. Again her answer was "Obtain more knowledge."

WOMEN NEED TO LEARN

"Let the women of the country be informed thoroughly on all questions of national and local importance. Knowledge precedes sensible action, and women must be informed if they are to take their rightful place and bear their just burden in the conduct of government.

"Women have been criticised for not having done more to remedy certain political and social conditions in our national affairs since they have obtained the vote. But I firmly believe that on all questions that involve some great moral issue, women are by nature bound to take the right side.

"All over the country, women of the Federation are doing their part in making the right public opinion. The Federation is a non-partisan organization, and seeks only the betterment of the whole country.

"I have great faith in the women of the country, and just as they are the mothers of tomorrow's citizens, so also are they the mothers in another sense, of a better America."

TERHUNE AT 78 IN ROMANCE

William L. Terhune, 78, president of the Boston Square and Compass Club and one of the most widely known Masons in Boston, is to be wedded a second time, June 10, at the Hotel Majestic in New York, to Mrs. Lila B. Terhune of Washington and New York.

The announcement was made yesterday by Mr. Terhune at his suite in the Hotel Somerset, where he has resided since last January. "It will be a quiet little wedding," said Mr. Terhune. "I have every desire to avoid publicity in the matter. My relatives object to the marriage. There will probably be very few persons invited to the ceremony."

Giving as a reason for the objection of relatives the fact that his first wife, Mrs. Nellie L. Terhune, died in March, 1927, a little more than two years ago, Mr. Terhune stated that he had hoped to keep his marriage plans a secret until after the ceremony was performed.

BRITAIN ALL SET TO COUNT ITS BIGGEST VOTE

London, May 29 (AP)—Party leaders, facing the zero hour of the general parliamentary elections tomorrow, today produced cherished aces-in-the-hole in attempts to drive home campaign points and clinch new votes.

The Liberals, banking on Lloyd George's scheme to reduce unemployment through increased public works, launched an important manifesto signed by 105 leading commercial, industrial, professional and financial men, declaring they had examined the project as well as the criticisms of it and were convinced it was practical and financially sound.

Liberal headquarters claimed it would set like a bombshell and pointed to the names appended to it which under ordinary circumstances undoubtedly would carry considerable weight. Among them were Lord Ashton of Hyde, Baron Bethell, Baron Maclay, Baron Meston, Viscount Cowdray, Sir Robert Hadfield, Sir Samual Instone and Sir Walter Runciman.

LAST RITES FOR VICTIM IN BLAZE

Funeral services for Joseph Kopf of Dorchester, one of four persons burned to death in a fire at his East Cottage st. home a week ago, were conducted at St. Margaret's Church today with a solemn high mass of requiem celebrated by Rev. Joseph Barnley.

A firing squad from the Charlestown Navy Yard was present at the services and a bugler sounded taps from the choir loft. In the sanctuary were Rev. Francis Malley of Lynn, a relative of the deceased; Rev. Leo Sullivan and Rev. Edward O'Brien of St. William's Church, Dorchester.

The body was escorted to Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford, preceded by a hearse containing the body of Kopf's three-year-old son, Joseph, who was also a victim of the fire.

A large number of mourners accompanied the body to the cemetery, among them Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley and a delegation of officials of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company where Kopf had been employed.

2 U. S. WOMEN FLEE CHINESE WAR HORROR

Amoy, China, May 29 (AP)—The thrilling experiences of Mrs. C. H. Holleman and Mrs. Henry Poppen during the looting of the Lungyengchow Mission and their escape to Amoy in Chinese clothing, were revealed today by the two women who, although suffering from nervous shock, were sufficiently recovered to tell what had happened.

Mrs. Holleman's husband, Dr. Holleman of Springfield, S. D., was kidnaped by Chinese, who said they needed him to treat the wounded. The refugees said 2000 Communist soldiers attacked the missionary compound of the American Reform Presbyterian Mission.

Mrs. Poppen, wife of a missionary, said:

"I was teaching my son, Kenneth, when rifle firing began and enemy troops were seen approaching. Realizing the danger, I hurried with the children to the girls' school. Mrs. Holleman, with her children, joined us.

"The school soon became a precarious location as marauding troops were firing recklessly. We attempted to enter the homes of Chinese friends, but they refused, feeling our presence might endanger their lives. However, other Chinese friends gave us clothing and directed us to an empty house where we hid.

"After dark we dressed in the Chinese clothes and crossed the river. Other Chinese friends assisted us, making arrangements for our departure to Amoy.

"Saturday night, May 25, cannot be described. It was full of horrors, fears of bandits, near exhaustion and rain storms.

MARX BROS. IN MET, PREMIERE TONIGHT

Fun will be supreme at the Metropolitan Theater tonight when one of the best programs ever presented at a New England premier showing goes on view at midnight for the New England Film Relief Association.

The Four Marx Brothers, famed as one of the greatest comedy teams in the history of the stage, are scheduled to appear in New England's first showing of "The Cocoanuts," all-talking picturization of the musical comedy hit of the same name.

The film version of this musical extravaganza adheres closely to the original with its humorous story embellished by the comic antics of the four famous brothers. Groucho is to be seen picking pockets with his unbelievable cleverness, even succeeding in taking the shirt off a man's back without the man's knowledge. His usual rapid fire line of imbecilities accompanies the movements of his hands, while Zeppo stands by as foil.

"Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic," Eddie Cantor's latest mirthquake, is also to be seen and heard. Frank Crummit will be seen and heard in a skit called "The Gay Cabalero," while Jules Bledsoe, famous for his singing of "Old Man River, in "Show Boat," will be heard in "Old Man Trouble." All seats are reserved at $2, proceeds to go to the sick and death benefit fund of the association.

ADVANCED SIX Delivered, Fully Equipped $1912

THE Coupé has a very strong appeal for people who desire a car of such highly personal character in preference to the Sedan type.

So Nash engineers created a group of three extremely striking Coupés of great beauty and unusual performance ability.

For business, the small family, or as a second car the Standard Six Coupé is easily the choice of the $1,000 field.

Powered by its Nash-designed, high-compression, 7-bearing motor, with Bohnalite pistons, and torsional vibration damper, it provides sparkling performance in all driving conditions.

A particularly desirable asset of this Coupé is its riding ease achieved by alloy steel springs individually designed to its exact size and weight, whose effectiveness is heightened thru the employment of Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, outboard mounted.

High among the many outstanding features of the Special and Advanced Six Coupés (both of which have big rumble seats in the rear deck) is the Twin-Ignition type motor (with 22% more power, 5 miles per hour more speed, and 2 extra miles per gallon of gasoline, as compared to the same type of motor with single ignition).

These larger models also have the famous Bijur centralized chassis lubrication which lubricates all vital chassis parts with a single depression of a foot pedal. And hydraulic shock absorbers (Lovejoy and Houdaille) with the Nash outboard mounting which greatly increases their helpfulness.

All "400" models are fully factory equipped with front and rear bumpers, hydraulic shock absorbers, spare tire lock and tire cover. In your delivered price there's not a dollar added to the factory price for these features.

Compare fully equipped, delivered prices on other cars and see how much is added to their factory prices to cover these same features.

WINCHESTER HORSE SHOW TO AID HOSPITAL FUND

Many Children to Ride in Various Classes

NOW THAT ANOTHER BENEFIT is looming on the social horizon it is a happy change to have horses instead of fashionable purses supplying the "wherewithal" for the Winchester Hospital next Saturday. Aforesaid purses are, of course, always open to aid the needy, but the drain has been heavy this winter and so a horse show with many cash prizes and silver trophies strikes a popular note with society at the moment. Especially in view of the race meet of the Eastern Horse Club following in two weeks. In fact society is keen on fine horses any time that they are shown in action.

CHILDREN OF THE ELITE view the world from atop thoroughbred mounts if one may judge by the large number of entries in the various children's classes. Included are pony jumpers. How children love to parade equestrian skill for the galleries, even as you and I! And there's high stepping harness ponies and riding competitions and everything, with an imposing array of sterling silver trophies, cash prizes and other awards for good riders of good horses. Governor Frank G. Allen is giving a large silver cup for the saddle horse class and former Governor Alvan T. Fuller a handsome salad plate picked up abroad for its fine workmanship.

MARY and Alvan T. Fuller, Jr., by the way, are riding that day, competing in the children's classes, where also Elinor Ward, Peter Ely, John Harding, Virginia and F. Harold Tolman, Jr., Patricia Bird, Ann Kenyon of Attleboro, Betty, Billy and Charles Scudder of Fisher Hill, Jack Lewis, Newton, Archie Simmons, Ann Brook and Billy Hale strive for the silver awards.

WITH MRS. ORREN C. SANBORN chairman of the show committee, one is convinced that the hospital will be glad for this 8th annual Winchester Horse Show, to be held at Good's Riding School, Franklin ave., Medford, on Saturday, June 1. Among the donors of prizes are Misses Anna C. and Marjorie Danforth, Calvin Austin, Mrs Homer Loring, Ruth Good, John B. Collinson, Arthur Kidder, Mrs. Florence McCreery, Mrs. Daniel C Begg, Arthur Black, F. L. Dunne Miss Constance Greco, Louis K. Liggett, Richard Ward, Albion L. Danforth, Frank B. Hopewell, A. T. Hartt, H. Hollen Crowell and John B. Macomber.

SALTONSTALL HOSPITALITY, always dispensed with a prodigal hand and especially on the day of the annual Chestnut Hill Horse Show, has become an institution to which visitors look forward with almost as much pleasure as the show itself. This year Mrs. George Saltonstall West keeps "open house" with preparations for dining 80 to 100 show fans. Among those from out of town lunching at the West estate tomorrow will be Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames of New York and North Easton, Mr. and Mrs. John Butler (Grace Brooks) and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cushing of Pomfret, Ct., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lockley and Hugh Fowler, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. George Timmings, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Danielson, Groton; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wolcott, Readville; Mrs. Rudolph Weld.

Nancy McNeil Janet McNeil

Nancy and Janet McNeil, children of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McNeil of Brookline, attended the children's tea party at Filene's restaurant yesterday in aid of the Children's Hospital. (Staff Photo.)

HUNDREDS OF BRIGHT-EYED children—an animated sea of dainty pastel party frocks—little bare round arms and chubby hands patting vigorous applause for Marjorie Nichols' dancing—and overhead, bright splashes of colored balloons bobbing the ceiling—this was the children's tea party in Filene's restaurant yesterday. The very young set lent its presence to aid the Children's Hospital Transportation fund and the scene was one to warm the heart. An atmosphere of spontaneous joy pervaded the place as the beautifully costumed and coached pupils of the Lucille Perry Hall School of Dancing pirouetted for the approval of their small contemporaries.

FUTURE debutantes assembled as guests of Mrs. W. A. Carl of Brookline at the party included Nancy and Janet McNeil, daughters of the Harold F. McNeils, Betty and Barbara Allen from the Thomas Allen menage, Nancy Godfrey, daughter of the Frank Godfreys, Agnes "Dolly" Ogilby, whose father is the Rev. Henry B Ogilby of Brookline; Lucy Pope, daughter of the Ralph Pope, Jr., Fredericka Sargent, from the house of Arthur H. Sargent, Jr., and many more. Mrs. Frank G. Allen also was a guest. Several parties were assembled from various smart neighborhoods that less fortunate kiddies may be comfortably carried to the Children's Hospital for treatment.

DEBUTANTES OF THIS SEASON, who have put in a strenuous season between ushering for various charities and keeping up with the continual round of parties, are just now engaged in resting up for summer gayeties at the shore. They will need to be fresh for the summer, too, for it is just as gay down on the North Shore from mid-June to September as it was in town. Miss Mary Hammond, who has just returned from a two months' trip to California, remains in town for the Hallowell-Pratt wedding on June 10, and then goes with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Hammond, to their summer home in New London, Ct.

MISS BARBARA WELCH, JUST home from Europe, is deeply immured in the satisfying task of preparing for Radcliffe entrance exams next fall. And she finds study quite restful after the thrilling excursions recently enjoyed in Europe, she avers. Miss Ruth Gibson will soon be home from Vassar for the summer and will join her mother, Mrs. Kirkland Gibson and sister, Miss Eleanor, at their Manchester summer place next week. Miss Rose Movius is to rest in the family summer camp in New Hampshire after next week and may go abroad in the fall as several other debs are doing. Miss Josephine Sturgis is another popular deb who transfers her activities to Manchester in two weeks, with the Singing Beach cottage her summer address.

TEMPERANCE BUT NO DRY LAWS

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—A nation-wide organization of women, seeking temperance but opposing prohibition, is being formed under the leadership of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York, former Republican National Committeewoman.

Plans for the organization were discussed at a meeting of women from 28 states. Temporary headquarters will be opened in New York and state leaders will immediately launch membership campaigns.

Although the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which favors temperance through prohibition, was not mentioned by name, leaders of the new movement intimated their organization would oppose its program.

what comes after the oratory

DeSoto

Frederick the Great once wrote to the Duchess of Gotha: "Heaven is on the side with the biggest battalions."

Paraphrasing the epigram, coined by this celebrated military genius, we might say that sometimes in selling automobiles, "Heaven is on the side with the biggest adjectives."

With the support of a heavy barrage of superlatives, even a weak car may take a customer by storm. But the real test comes after the oratorical barrage has lifted and the car must try to live up to the oratory—when it must speak for itself.

Then is the time when you are sure to find the Chrysler-built De Soto Six pointing pridefully to a record that more than substantiates every claim made in its behalf, while its price-rivals are apologizing for extravagant promises unfulfilled.

Already we have abundant proof that a De Soto Six, after 40,000 miles, retains its good looks, its alert, smooth power, and its easy-riding qualities—that its low operating and maintenance costs contribute real economy of ownership. And we are confident of an equally impressive history when De Sotos shall have reached the 100,000 mile mark—and indefinitely beyond.

A SIX-DAY NOVEL

Thrilling Six-Day Novel by a Noted Author

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Ione Farr gets a position with Max Weimar's music publishing house in New York. Her chum, Marie Karey, marries Palmer Elliott, a young lawyer. She follows the idea of Ione's married sister, Jenephe, who has a small son and also holds a position in a New York shop. Bess Weimar's office manager, takes Ione to Tin Pan Alley, where she meets the famous song writer, Wolfe Speed, and later persuades Anthony Ros, a matinee idol, to use Speed's new song. Weimar gives her a much better position. Ione falls in love with Alan Blake, an accompanist. They plan to be married. She is inclined to be a little jealous of Fluff Hartwick, a girl in the office. Meanwhile, she gives up most of her friends. She feels that Jenepher is proving that a wife cannot hold down a job and run a household. Benz takes her motoring and she wonders if she is giving up too much.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER 3

BENZ sent the roadster skimming straight through Englewood.

"O, K., Ione? Spare one evening out of all your life; that's not too much, is it? One short evening for a lonesome fellow?"

"You're going to Sunset Inn? Oh!" She felt a tingle of excitement, a half defiant gaiety.

At Sunset Inn Benz pulled their table up to the fire. The waiter

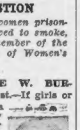
The Curious Quizzer

Back Bay Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures.

THE QUESTION

Do you believe women prisoners should be allowed to smoke, as favored by a member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs?



MISS ADRIENNE W. BUEKAM, Peterborough st.—If girls or women are serving a jail sentence, they are paying for their sins, anyway. In their confinement such women enjoy little enough recreation. To deprive them of harmless smoking, which is a woman's right as it is that of the men, I believe to be not fair. As a rule women, especially housewives, can not stand up the same as a man when it comes to smoking. To prevent a woman prisoner from smoking will not lessen in her mind the fact that she is paying the price demanded for her sins. Women who desire to smoke in prison should not be denied that right.

REV. H. C. TUCKER, Audubon rd.—Whether the woman is in prison serving a sentence or is in her own home I do not believe she should form the habit of cigarette smoking. I know a great number of the women who smoke, but I do not approve of their doing so. It is all right for men to smoke if they want to. I think that if the privilege of smoking is ever given to women smokers while they are serving prison terms that the indulgence will be allowed only to those of mature age. The so-called "flapper" girl in most cases smokes only because she knows she shouldn't, and if she is put in jail she should not be allowed to smoke there.

MISS PEGGY GIBSON, Batavia st.—Women's rights entitle them to smoke. They work the same as do the men. They vote on all city, state and national questions as equals of the men. And there is no reason why they should be deprived of smoking in prison unless men prisoners were denied the same form of recreation. I am very much pleased to learn that intelligent women in their club meetings are taking interest in giving some little enjoyment to women smokers who at present are not allowed to smoke a cigarette now and then when held under restraint by an order of a police court.

JOHN RANDALL, Audubon rd.—Men sent to prison are allowed to smoke and I can see no reason why women sent there should be deprived of the same recreation. The woman smoker is used to cigarettes the same as is a man, and why should the law prevent her from smoking? Women in prison are in a difficult position and only they themselves know what a strain it is. If smoking cigarettes makes their lives a little brighter then I believe that any woman among those in prison serving a term for doing wrong should be allowed to smoke as many cigarettes as she wanted.

INDUSTRY LOCKS HANDS WITH FUN IN KEEPING REVERE UP FRONT

SOME OF MAYOR CASASSA'S AIDES IN BUILDING UP REVERE.

By CARL MORRISON

He was christened Andrew J. Casassa. Most folks call him Andy.' And he is, you know, mayor of Revere.

A short chap, stocky, strong-featured, gray haired.

First of the city's chief executives to have graduated from the Revere high schools. Played football at Revere and Boston University. Still plays football, after a fashion, when politics needs shaking up. He never fumbles.

Mayor Casassa leads the liquor squad on raids when he feels such leadership is needed.

He is a Grade A attorney, and is financially interested in many of Revere Beach's amusement resorts. His public career has been varied enough to provide experience for almost any job he may elect to win.

For three years he was a Revere selectman. For three years he was a member of the Revere school committee. For three years he was a Representative, and for a similar period he served as State Senator.

When first elected selectman he was the youngest in the state—just 21. The Revere Board of Trade was his idea and he was its first president. When the Chamber of Commerce supplanted it, he was the chamber president for five years.

He organized a bank and is president of it—the First National Bank of Revere.

So it is quite apparent that Revere citizens have fullest confidence in him.

"BUILD UP REVERE"

The keynote slogan of his administration is "Build Up Revere." It is embodied in a red sign hung in front of City Hall.

If all public officials are boosters for the "home town," Mayor "Andy" is no exception.

"We have the smallest death rate of any Massachusetts city," he says. "Revere is an ideal suburb, so near the ocean and so available to Boston. We are indeed a healthy community."

The man who made Revere Beach famous is John J. Hurley. Through his vision and pioneer efforts, the beach is today a $6,000,000 investment, attracting so...e 10,000,000 persons during a season.

"I'm proud that I am the pioneer of Revere, like Paul Revere was a pioneer of freedom," said Hurley.

A residential city with at least one fourth of its population children of school age, Revere offers much to one looking for a home in a progressive community.

The man who has his finger on the pulse of the growing city is City Clerk Albert J. Brown. In his opinion, there is no better way to guage the progress of a city than in its record of marriages, births and deaths.

Marriages and births have run far ahead of the deaths in recent years, he announces.

"The rate generally averages about twice as many births as deaths, perhaps more than twice," he said, glancing at his tabulations.

For the last 15 years, the new additions to Revere families have averaged about 800 yearly.

Brown is known to everyone in town as their friend. His public service to Revere covers 30 years. For 25 he has been city clerk.

The good-natured city official is now secretary of the City Clerks' Association of Massachusetts.

GROWING FAST

At the last official census, Revere was given 32,261 population. This represented an increase of nearly one-third over that of 10 years ago—a significant growth. Revere stood fifth in Massachusetts in point of population growth.

Since the 1925 census, the city has gained 3000 or 4000 population at least, it is estimated.

Property valuation in Revere is in excess of $41,000,000.

Chief of Police Edward J. Tighe, head of his department for the last two years, is a veteran of 19 years' service. The chief, known as a "good scout," says he "keeps human" through his hobby of following the boxing game.

As for law enforcement in Revere, the chief said that arrests were diminishing.

A citizen typical of the product Revere is developing is Charles H. White, president of the city council. Unassuming and modest on any subject except that of "helping Revere grow," he has a series of notable achievements behind him.

He is president of the Franklin Park Lumber Co., which does a million-dollar business each year. Besides heading the city's biggest enterprise, White builds some 50 or 60 houses a year as his "sideline."

White is known to thousands in this state, as he is now president of the Massachusetts Federation of Masonic Clubs.

NEED RAPID TRANSIT

The council president is a booster for Mayor Casassa, who he says is "progressive, plenty peppy and honest."

"But what Revere needs most of all," he added, "is the advantage of rapid transit to Boston. Our growth is delayed by the long and annoying waits at those bridges. They stifle our natural expansion, but the extensions must come in time."

The most "pencil-shy" man in Revere is William L. O'Brien, serving his second year as president of the Chamber of Commerce.

If a photographer had accompanied the Boston Evening American reporter, the expression "camera-shy" would have been appropriate. O'Brien had never been "cartooned" before and protested against posing.

"No one wants to see my stub born jaw in print," he explained.

The chamber official finally relented when told that the chief of police had "taken a chance."

READING CASE OPENS MONDAY

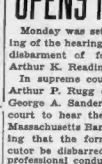
Monday was set today for opening of the hearing on a petition for disbarment of former Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading.

In supreme court, Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg delegated Justice George A. Sanderson of the same court to hear the petition of the Massachusetts Bar Association asking that the former state prosecutor be disbarred for alleged unprofessional conduct.

One of the principal charges against Reading concerns his alleged relations with representatives of the Decimo Club, an organization which was under investigation, but which was given a clean bill by Reading.

GOLDEN RULE SHOP ON 5-DAY WEEK

A five-day week for employes of the Golden Rule Shoe Mfg. Co. of Lynn was announced today by "Golden Rule" Jim Daly.



Jim Daly

The shortened working week will be put into effect in June or July and will concern 1500 employes, all of whom have a financial interest in the business. Floor space of the company's plants, which have a capacity output of 10,000 pairs of shoes daily, will be increased, Daly said.

Daly's story is one of the most romantic in the shoe business. When, in 1924, the Cushing Shoe Co., of which he was president, failed, 400 of his employes and scores of friends outside his business, came to his aid and raised a fund of $10,000 to prevent the factory from changing hands. This they found impossible and Daly founded the Golden Rule Shoe Manufacturing Company, which began business with 35 employes and mushroomed into a huge concern within a few years.

Weymouth Editor Left Paper to Widow

The will of Frank Fisher Prescott, former editor and publisher of the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript, was filed today in Dedham Probate Court.

The testator names his wife, Mrs. Fannie A. Prescott, as executrix, and empowers her to continue publication of the newspaper "for such length of time as she may determine."

ENDS NINE YEAR WILL FIGHT

A nine-year battle over the will of their mother ended today in Middlesex Probate Court when Lowell E. Maybery, counsel for three Lowell sisters, told Judge Charles N. Harris that an agreement had been reached.

The will was that of Mrs. Margaret C. Bagshaw of Lowell, widow of W. H. Bagshaw, prominent Lowell manufacturer. She died in 1920, leaving an estate of approximately $200,000.

One son, Arthur Bagshaw, received 84 shares of capital stock of the W. H. Bagshaw Company, a $2,000,000 Lowell corporation. Two other sons, Charles H. and Walter J. Bagshaw, were willed 96 shares each, and in addition 30 shares each of the Hy-Carbo Steel Company of Lowell, with provision that they each pay the estate $20,000.

The rest and residue was left to be divided among four daughters, Mrs. Lena M. Mahoney, now dead; Mrs. Bertha R. Coffey, Mrs. Margaret M. Horan and Mrs. Emma Foys, all of Lowell.

A short time after filing of the will for probate in 1920, three of the sisters, Lena, Margaret and Emma, began contest against probating of the testament, claiming undue influence on the part of their brothers.

Hit-Run Rewards

Miss Pearl Doppler of Dedham, A. J. McManus of Peabody and Edgar H. Williams of Danvers will be presented with $25 checks today by Governor Allen for furnishing information that led to the arrest of hit-run drivers.

East Milton Vet Claims She Still Collects His Cash

East Brookfield, May 29—Mrs. Bessie Lee Baine Russell, 32, blonde wife of a farmer, formerly of East Milton, is under arrest today on a charge of bigamy, preferred by state police following an investigation of her four previous marriages.

Her arrest was brought about through the efforts of her fourth husband, William L. Dreyer of Montclair st., Quincy, a war veteran, who told the authorities she married Russell in 1927 without obtaining a divorce from him, and that she is still drawing $45 a month compensation money from the Government under his name and on his war record.

The police were amazed when they learned that Russell is the young woman's alleged fifth husband. A cursory investigation on their part has unearthed information that her first husband, name unknown, was separated from her when he was sent to the federal prison at Atlanta some years ago.

Her second husband is believed by police to have been named Schaffer and is said to have divorced her in New York, but the date of the action is unknown. Husband Number 3, the police charge, was named Ernest E. Carter, formerly of Newport News, Va., but whom they are unable to now find.

Dreyer was her fourth venture into matrimony, the police allege. The couple lived in East Milton on West Squantum Road, but Dreyer claims she left him several years ago and that he has been trying to find her since.

His efforts in this endeavor were successful when he took the matter up with William D. Donaghy of the Boston Legal Aid Society, in an attempt to have government payments of his compensation to her stopped.

Through the Boston bureau, which in turn communicated with the Veterans' Bureau at the State House, Dreyer learned her whereabouts and that she had married Russell in 1927 at Worcester. State police were notified and began an investigation which resulted in the arrest today.

Mrs. Russell will be arraigned later today on the bigamy charge, while authorities continue their investigation into the series of matrimonial ventures.

30,000 Expected to Watch B.C.-Holy Cross Game

PURPLE 5-3 FAVORITE TO TAKE CONTEST

By JOHN GILLOOLY

THIRTY THOUSAND fans are expected to storm Fitton Field tomorrow afternoon when Boston College and Holy Cross play the first of their annual diamond series. The Purple is a 5-to-3 favorite.

It will be an exhibition in which a great offensive team, B. C., will attempt to pound out enough base hits to upset the greatest defensive team in years, Holy Cross. And the Crusaders will have their best defensive asset, Frank Nekola, on the mound.

Tomorrow's classic struggle looms as a case of whether or not the B. C. batters, all of whom are hitting for better than .300, can get to Nekola for enough hits to score a victory. And the 5 to 3 odds in favor of Holy Cross seem to indicate that, in general opinion, Nekola will rule supreme.

Nekola is an undefeated hurler. He has turned back Yale on two occasions, allowing the Elis two hits in the first and one lone bingle in the second game. His latest performance saw him letting Georgetown down with three hits. And any hurler who can do this to the Bulldogs and Hilltoppers must be good.

BEHIND Nekola will be the very classy infield of Jimmy Shevlin, first; Captain Dick Harrell, second; Blondy Ryan, short, and Jerry Shanahan, third. The entire quartet is close to perfection in fielding and Ryan and Shevlin are both hitting for .350.

Jack Barry has three great flychasers in his outfield in Con Hurley, left; Henry Lawrence, right, and Andy Fisher, center. Hurley is the heavy hitter of the Holy Cross team. Dick Phelan, who has the facility of coming through in the pinches, will be behind the bat.

Holy Cross has practically everything, with the exception of hitting, in its favor as it prepares for the big game. And, even at that, the B. C. hitters will have to go some to keep their average up against Nekola.

DESPITE the odds in favor of the Purple a fighting group of Boston College ball players will journey over the hills to Worcester, tomorrow morning, confident of nosing out a victory.

The Boston College nine is without a twirler on the eve of the game. Not one of Coach Hugh Duffy's quartet of moundmen has convinced him that he can pitch well enough, at the present, to check the mediocre hitting B. C. outfit.

Huch McNulty is going to start for Boston College. Coach Duffy didn't make any announcement to this effect and it might turn out differently. But McNulty is the only one of the quartet with experience enough to fling them against the Crusaders.

Two years ago McNulty defeated Holy Cross in straight games. Last year he was driven to the showers in the two games which he started.

McNulty, who was on the bench with a sore arm for a week, tested his wing on Monday against Georgetown. And his stuff was missing. The Hilltoppers got six runs on six hits and Hughie looked very poor.

ALTHOUGH he couldn't hold Georgetown in check Hughie should after the game that his arm was in better condition. With two days' rest he'll be prepared to pitch. And Coach Duffy is expecting great things from Hughie. The Brighton boy has plenty of courage and enough ability to beat Holy Cross if his arm is right. He's a senior at B. C. and will give every inch and ounce to scribble his name in the book of B. C. immortals before he leaves the Newton towers with his diploma.

One thing that Coach Duffy is cheerful over is the fact that his team is a decided under dog. In all past athletic conflicts between the bitter rivals the under dog has either won or made a courageous struggle. And Holy Cross, although Coach Jack Barry has been trying to chase any overconfidence from his camp, is really cocky concerning the outcome of the first game.

Boston College and Holy Cross will also have the Eastern intercollegiate baseball title at stake in their wrangle tomorrow. H. C. has won 19 of 29 ball games played. They beat Reading of the International League on two occasions and held the Braves to a low score.

PRINCETON was the only team to spoil the Holy Cross record. The Tigers got the Purple on an off-day and won by 5-1 against a team that, ordinarily, would have beaten them.

Boston College's record stands at 14 victories in 16 games. Georgetown and Fordham were the teams to mar the B. C. secutcheon. But B. C. has victories over both Georgetown and Fordham to even accounts.

And so the enemies declare war. Holy Cross looks like the victor but they'll have to conquer the fighting spirit and hitting of B. C. before the Eagles will toss in the towel. It should be one of the best college ball games in many years.

STARTS AGAINST PURPLE

Hugh McNulty, Boston College pitcher picked by Coach Duffy to start against the Holy Cross team in the Eagles' "big game" of the year. The contest, which is to be staged on Fitton Field, Worcester, tomorrow, is expected to draw a crowd of 30,000 college fans.

MR. BOSTON By JACK CONWAY

"IT is likely," said Mr. Boston today, "that the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will pass a rule which will give the referee sole jurisdiction in stopping a bout in view of the controversy that followed the ending of the Rawson-Smith match.

"There were quite a few persons who witnessed the mill who were of the opinion that Smith was in condition to keep right on tossing ponderous right hand socks when George Lawrence, his chief second, tossed a towel into the ring. Smith growled when told the fight was over and muttered something about wishing to flatten Big Boy.

"The conflict was jammed with all kinds of action and the fans would have liked to have witnessed a clean knockout with either Smith or Rawson flat on his back.

"In the excitement of battle, seconds have been known to lose their heads and toss a towel into the ring. I have seen one second trying to throw in a towel and another one preventing him from doing so.

"Then there have been cases in ring history where a second has intentionally brought about the defeat of his own boxer by hurling a towel into the ring.

"The referee is in a position to know whether a boxer is able to continue or not. He also has the right to consult with one of the Boxing Commission's doctors. With the referee doing the deciding as to whether a bout shall be stopped, the 'in the bag' boys would not be in a position to question the motive which prompted the stopping of a bout.

"JACK DEMPSEY has found it is not as easy to promote boxing as he thought. He will now try his hand as a promoter in Chicago as a partner of Paddy Mullins.

"Bill Carey, president of Madison Sq. Garden Corporation, sealed the doom of Dempsey as a promoter in New York when he leased the Yankee stadium and the Polo Grounds. Without a suitable arena Dempsey could not stage a big bout even if he were successful in landing one.

"Carey also signed Sharkey, Schmeling and Paulino, the three heavyweight aces. Unable to secure the services of any member of this trio, Dempsey could not hope to put on a major attraction.

"Dempsey's failures as a promoter in New York has hurt his pride. He knows it was the Garden which brought about his downfall in New York. He may decide to retaliate by staging a comeback.

Gene Normile would like to stage a Dempsey bout at Tia Juana, while Mullins is anxious to put the Tiger in with Otto Von Porat at Chicago.

"If Dempsey cannot draw big gates as a promoter, he can do so as an active heavyweight contender.

"THE break in the Dempsey-Fugasy-Cole combine was not a surprise to those in close touch with the boxing situation. I regret Fugasy was obliged to accept another severe disappointment. He has carried on in the fact of numerous setbacks. One cannot but admire his splendid courage.

"THE lack of a suitable indoor arena has been the real reason for Fugasy's failure. He is obliged to remain inactive nine months in each year. During those months, the New York Garden promotes indoor shows and secures options on the services of the star boxers for the outdoor season.

"If Fugasy had an indoor arena, he would be able to secure sufficient capital to get an outdoor spot.

"If Dempsey promotes at the Chicago Coliseum, he will have to compete with the Chicago Stadium, which has a seating capacity of 25,000. The Chicago Stadium is the finest indoor arena in the world. It looks as though the former champion will receive another setback as a promoter. All of which will bring Dempsey's return to the ring as a fighter nearer."

CHAPMAN AND DUELBERG TO RACE AGAIN

Frans Duelberg's stock in the bike racing game is up just 100 per cent as a result of his sensational riding at the Revere cycle track last Saturday night, and today he is regarded as one of Francisco Georgetti's most dangerous opponents for the American championship this year.

Duelberg again faces George Chapman, his conqueror of Saturday night, at the Revere track.

Saturday night in addition to the motor-paced race, Butler will stage a tandem match race of three one-mile heats. The very best riders available for this race will be signed.

YOST THROUGH AS GRID COACH

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 29 (AP)—Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, who on several occasions has announced his retirement as football coach, only to take up leadership with the opening of the gridiron season, has permanently retired, he said today.

"I will never coach again under any condition; I have permanently retired," he said.

He volunteered no comment when the name of Dr. Kohn W. Wilce, retired football coach of Ohio State, was mentioned.

Larger Ball Makes Golf Harder

By JOHNNY FARRELL
American Open Golf Champion

IT WAS in England that the news first reached us that the United States Golf Association had adopted a larger and lighter ball. Naturally the news immediately was followed by a debate between the pros and cons. It seemed to me that the action of the U. S. G. A. had a chilling effect upon the golfing populace of Great Britain where there had been a decided opposition to any change from the prevailing 1.62 ball.

It was only recently that the Royal and Ancient Society of St. Andrews, acquiesced no doubt to popular opinion, determined not to effect a change in the golf ball at this time. The decision was hailed with delight everywhere, although there was a small minority that favored a ball less peppy than the present one.

It will be interesting now to see what the reaction of St. Andrews is to the decision of the U. S. G. A. It is not the first time that the American solons have voted to go it alone. It was not long since that the word of St. Andrews was golf law the whole world over, but now, since America has established unquestioned supremacy, it seems to me that the British will soon adopt the ball of the new standard.

There are a great many thousands of English balls sold on the American market and, if St. Andrews adheres to its determination not to vote a change, these manufacturers will find themselves without any American export sale or else they will have to expand their business for the making of balls of different dimensions.

HOWEVER, the public is not interested in the technical side of the question. What it wants to know is whether the new ball is going to make the game more difficult. I think it will do so. The new ball will come pretty close to the "flyer," a ball that had been tried and found wanting.

It is said by the sponsors of the new ball that it will help the poorer player because it will be easier to putt with, easier to hit because of its increased size, and will sit up better in the rough. This all may be true and doubtlessly it is, but what effect is the wind going to have upon it? It is quite certain that the new ball is not going to make the poorer player hit straighter.

The number of those in the duffer class, who are able to hit straight with the present ball, are very few. Therefore, there is no escaping the fact that their number is not going to increase with the introduction of the lighter ball.

It is also true that those who hook or slice (and how many do not?) will not have their numbers decreased. They will continue to hook and slice and the big difference, as I see it, is that their hooks and slices will be very much more pronounced. The wind, no matter how gentle, is certain to accentuate the curving career of the new ball.

I believe also that the new ball will spread the fatal disease of pressing. Having been able to obtain fairly long distances with the old ball, the golfer is going to try and get more than he should out of the new one.

HELEN WILLS WINS IN PARIS TENNIS

Paris, May 29 (AP)—Miss Helen Wills, defending her women's singles title in the French tennis championships, reached the fourth round today by defeating Miss Ruth "Billie" Tapscott of South Africa, 6—1, 6—3.

Frau Friedleben, German Tennis star, eliminated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, California veteran, in the second round of women's singles in the French championships today. The scores were 7—5, 6—1.

Mrs. Bundy's defeat left Miss Helen Wills, the defending champion, the only American still in the running for the title.

MULCAHY LEADS B. C. TRACKMEN

William Mulcahy of Roslindale was elected track captain of Boston College for the season 1929-30 at a meeting of 19 Eagle lettermen held in the Boston College A. A. headquarters at the Heights today.

Mulcahy has been a star quartermiler for Boston College for three seasons. He prepared at Boston College high. The new captain will succeed Capt. George Wilczewski.

Timothy J. Creedan of Brookline was chosen to manage the track team. Letters were awarded to all athletes who placed in any one of the New England intercollegiate, Navy and Holy Cross meets.

Departure of Penn Crews Delayed

PHILADELPHIA, May 29—Final examinations will delay the departure of the University of Pennsylvania varsity, junior varsity and freshman crews for Poughkeepsie until June 8, according to an announcement made by Russell C. Callow, coach of the oarsmen.

Callow had planned to start his oarsmen on their Hudson river training program on June 3, with the object in view of having three full weeks of practice over the four-mile course. With the change in plans only two weeks time will be available for the long distance work.

As in past years, Pennsylvania will establish headquarters at the Elms, at Highlands, just across the river from Poughkeepsie. The same boat house close to the ferry slip will be used. Morning and afternoon drills will give the oarsmen a busy two weeks.

During the next two weeks, Callow will drill his oarsmen on the Schuylkill with racing confined to the mile and five-sixteenth distance. Drills will be held after the examination periods and whenever possible in the morning also.

TWENTY varsity and 13 freshmen have been tentatively selected by Callow to compose the Poughkeepsie squad. He will take four substitutes for the varsity and junior varsity eights and the same number for the freshmen. The eight subs will be boated and will go through the same training program as the regulars. In this way Callow hopes to develop additional varsity prospects for next year.

Changes in the makeup of the three crews are regarded as likely, although Callow has not made any definite statement on the boating for the final races of the year.

Judging by the manner in which he stroked the varsity to victory over Harvard and Navy, Tiny Thrasher will again set the stroke for the varsity. He will probably have as his boatmates Lambert, 7, Wels, 6, Fins, 5, Kramer, 4, Teaf, 3, Barnhart, 2, and Grill, bow. The Jay Vees will probably be composed of Hofmann, bow, Sears, 2, Braue, 3, Wall, 4, Olsen, 5, Cheney, 6, Sheronas, 7, and Taeffner, stroke. Trowbridge and Anderson will be the coxswains.

Harry Davis, Harold DeVeau, Walter Voehringer and Bud Wilson will be the varsity substitutes. The freshmen not boated with any degree of permanency include A. Brown, S. Butler, J. Cadwalader, C. Cole, P. Cook, W. Hupfel, W. Johnson, W. Laakey, J. Martin, J. Meehan, E. P. and W. Weeks. George Loveless will cox. the first year eight.

Red Sox Break A's Winning Streak and Start Own

BARRETT PAIR PROVE BIG HELP TO TEAM

By NICK FLATLEY

RED SOX have started a winning streak and ended a beauty that belonged to the Athletics, so the two clubs will go after each other today with plenty of vim and vigor.

This promises to be a hot series in more ways than because of the weather.

Connie Mack's Athletics are wilted to win the pennant. They have the fever as badly as winning clubs get it coming down the stretch in September. This is only May, but the Macks act like a team that believes a single loss means ruin. Connie, with his 10-year ambition in sight, is nervous and jittery. He yanks pitchers, regardless, and switches his players around on every ball pitched. His whole club has caught the Mack interest. If you want to see a ball team that's trying, take a peek at the A's.

And the Red Sox are beginning to get back some of their early spirit. They have just split six games with the two toughest clubs in the league. That has restored some of their hope and fire. Which it well might do.

BILL CARRIGAN is rushing his reserves into each game, and gradually finding that he has a few men on the bench who may be better for him than some of the boys who have been holding down regular jobs.

Bob Barrett has been crashing through in glorious style with the bat, and he packs enough punch to have a tryout somewhere in the team. Bob won the opening Athletic game almost unaided and gave a gang of hot weather fans a real treat. He put the finishing touches on the best ball game the Sox have played this year, from a point of spectacularity.

Bigelow and Standaert can hit that baseball, whatever they may do in the field, and Ken Williams has shown an inclination to clout when he has gone in there. Carrigan has been successful lately with his subs, so don't be surprised to see the whole lot of them in there every afternoon.

It will be tough on the boys who make the box scores, but will tickle the fans. They like a manager who makes it look as if he were playing every possible card to squeeze out a ball game.

Teams like the Sox have to squeeze 'em from good clubs like the A's and Yanks. The Carrigans are learning that there's always a chance for the club that hustles no matter how powerful the gang in the lead may be.

BILL BARRETT of Cambridge looks like one of the greatest improvements the Red Sox have made for quite a long spell. They now have a capable right fielder for the first time since Harry Hooper used to scamper around that precinct.

There has been a long parade of them, like Boone, Taitt, Reichle, to mention a few, and none has filled the bill. The boys who could hit couldn't field. The chaps who could snare the elusive flies out of the sunbeams couldn't thump the marble.

Mister Barrett seems capable in both capacities. He plays all kinds of flies like a real outfielder, and the sun doesn't bother him a bit. He knows the hitters and is able to go back after a ball. And he swings a lusty cudgel. He will knock off a lot of runs for the Sox, and will be especially valuable against the southpaws.

Bill has always seemed like a chap who needed a steady job, to do his best. He fretted at being tossed around. He has the job now, so it's up to him to deliver. And all the home folks are rooting for him.

GILLIS will get a good tryout at second. Bill Regan's brother died, and Bill will not be back for a few days. Gillis is a fighting sonuvagun, the type that helps a club, and a little steady work may do him a lot of good. If hustling and gameness will win him a job, he'll have one.

The Sox wind up the series with the Macks tomorrow, playing a double-header at Braves Field, where all holiday as well as Sunday affairs are to be staged. The first one goes at 1:30, and Carrigan will have Russell and Morris to toss at the foe.

Danny McFadden, who bogtied the Yanks last week, will try to do it for the Sox this afternoon. Ed Rommell was C. Mack's selection.

33 CARS IN 500-MILE GRIND

Indianapolis, May 29 (AP) — Thirty-three of the fastest automobiles in the world underwent their final overhauling today in preparation forthe running tomorrow of the seventeenth annual 500-mile race.

The field was completed last night under dramatic circumstances, three drivers abandoning all caution to roar through the darkness in a final effort to Gains Place. Cliff Bergere, Los Angeles stunt man was the victor, dashing around the course at 103 miles an hour on a ride which could be followed only by the fire from his exhaust.

Zeke Meyers, Philadelphia, and Sam Greco, Scranton, Pa., were other pilots who risked their lives in the darkness to try to outrun Bergere for the thirty-third and last starting position.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Although most of the talent for the Interscholastic championships at Oakley on Friday and Saturday will be furnished by local boys, there is one out of state who is going to make them all step and he is Joe Pezzullo from Nyatt, R. I.

Joe Pezzullo broke into the limelight last year when he defeated Tommie Tailer of Newport in the 36-hole finals for the Rhode Island Junior championship. The meeting of a millionaire's son and a caddy was in itself a great story, but when the caddy came through with a victory over a boy who for years had been receiving daily instructions from a private professional, Joe Pezzullo became famous.

If Joe Pazzullo can master a passable knowledge of Oakley, he will give Jos Lynch and the other local favorites something to think about, for he is one of the most promising golfers in New England and is especially well versed at medal play.

Leo Diegel has returned from from abroad and it will be surprising if he wires over his entry for the Massachusetts open, which starts at the Vesper Country Club next Monday. Diegel is the present titleholder, having led the field at the end of 72 holes at Wollaston last year.

Tom Jones, professional at the Rhode Island Country Club, occupies a similar position in his section to that of John Cowan of Oakley. He is regarded as the leading instructor in Rhode Island and like Cowan, is booked up solid for weeks in advance.

Miss Virginia Kenworthy of Metacomet was highly elated over the fact that she was the only Rhode Island golfer considered for the Boston inter-city team.

Pressure is being brought to bear upon Miss Eleanor Allen of Oakley to accept the presidency of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts, succeeding the late Miss Fanny C. Osgood.

As Joe Pezzullo, the junior champion of Rhode Island, is attending school today, he will be unable to play Oakley before the interscholastics. Joe, who picked up his knowledge of the game while caddying at the Rhode Island C. C., will pay a visit to Oakley tomorrow and look over the course.

In all future W. G. A. championships, the low net scorer of the qualifying round will be awarded the Miss Fanny C. Osgood cup, which has been donated by Miss Louise E. Weld. The Osgood cup will be a permanent trophy, and the winners will have the custody of the cup for one year and their names inscribed upon it.

Next Monday, the Midland second team, winner of their divisional W. G. A. championship, will be the second team champions of Rhode Island at the Wannamoisett Country Club.

Unless there is a decided change in the weather, Miss Francis E. Stebbins of Bras Burn, the unsuccessful finalist in the recent W. G. A. championships, will not play with the Boston team in the inter-city matches. Miss Stebbins feels that she has played too much golf this spring and is most desirous of putting away her clubs for the summer months.

Mrs. H. P. Hosmer is doing some very effective missionary work for the annual Woodland Golf Club mixed foursomes, which will be played on next Wednesday. There are few courses as popular as Woodland for such an event and if the weather is right a record-breaking entry is predicted.

SCHOOLBOYS ON DIAMOND AND TRACK TODAY

By DICK McSWEENEY

The schoolboy sport fan does not have to rack his brain in an effort to discover what to do with his spare time this afternoon

Track, tennis and baseball beckon to the sport follower, and whichever pastime he chooses to attend he is certain to get his money's worth.

Speaking of track athletics, the dashes, hurdles and runs of both district and regimental divisions of the Hub schools are held at Tech Field in Cambridge this afternoon.

Hyde Park jumped into an early lead in the district events and grabbed off 39 points.

As usual, Boston English is favored in the Regimental field events Mechanic Arts looms up as a serious threat in the sprints, for Coach Jim Holland has been spending large amounts of time with his sprinters, and when he crooms them they stay that way.

To those fans who sniff at track, the attractive list of baseball games should be some consolation

Groton goes to Southboro for a battle with its traditional rival, St. Mark's School, and when you have tradition connected with interscholastic competition you don't need to say anything more to recommend the contest.

Russell Field is the scene of the Medford-Cambridge Latin fray and the Cantabs are hopeful of a win

Malden opens its gates to Lawrence, a husky nine that has made strong teams tremble this season. McCormickey tosses the ball for the visitors. The club has a batting punch which always makes its mark upon Mass., where he indulged in his love of sports, was himself a boxer and ran a baseball team. In Keene he is owner and manager of the Cheshire Beef Company and prominent in Rotary, Chamber of Commerce and other activities.

Commissioner James F Dawson is a Dover newspaperman, sports editor of Foster's Democrat. He was a participant in baseball and boxing activities in his early life at West Philadelphia and has lived in Springfield and Worcester.

Commission to Rule Granite State Bouts

Concord, N. H., May 29—The members of the recently appointed New Hampshire State Boxing Commission, Harvey Cohn of Hanover, chairman; William C. Coughlin of Keene and James P. Dawson of Dover, met at the State House and completed plans for taking over the control of all professional boxing matches to be held hereafter in New Hampshire

Amateur boxing will be in charge of the New England A. A. U., by which organization all amateur bouts will have to be sanctioned.

At the meeting the commission decided upon rules and regualtions and drew up a series of application forms for the registration of boxers, promoters, trainers, seconds, etc. Because of the time needed for getting these blanks printed the commission will not begin to function in control of bouts until June 10. Its offices will be at Hanover, in personal charge of Cohn, who is a former Olympic games athlete, and at the present time on the physical education staff of Dartmouth College.

The New Hampshire rules and regulations will be based upon those in force in Massachusetts and New York, and the commission in this State will endeavor to work in harmony with the authorities of those States. One regulation will limit the number of boxers from the same stable on the same bill to two. There will be no more refereeing of bouts by the manager of the boxer engaged, and other features of past shows in New Hampshire to which objection has been made will be eliminated

CORN said that the number of applications for registrations already received shows a healthy interest in the sport in New Hampshire and that meetings will be held regularly this summer in several open air arenas in different parts of the State.

Coughlin, another member of the commission, who is a prominent business man of Keene, formerly lived in Holliston and Milford

BRANDT IN FOR TRIBE AGAINST PHILLIES

Philadelphia, May 29—Big Ed Brandt was called upon today by President-Manager Emil Fuchs of the Braves to see if his southpaw slants would not prove effective in checking the Braves' losing streak, which has stretched to 10 games and has been going on for almost a fortnight.

The Braves lost another tough one in their second day's engagement with the Phillies, meaning that they made a close finish but couldn't quite come across. Really it is no tougher to be beaten by a one-sided score than by a slight margin, but baseball players and baseball scribes are ever wont to count all the tight battles as games that might have been won. Hence, it's always "tough" to lose the same.

19-Year-Old Youth Is Yale Mat Coach

New Haven, Ct., May 29 (AP)—The appointment of John O'Donnell as coach of freshman wrestling was announced by the Yale Athletic Association today. O'Donnell, who is 19 years of age, will be the youngest coach Yale has ever had.

The appointment gives the O'Donnells complete charge over Yale wrestling, as Eddie O'Donnell, brother of John, is the varsity mentor. The new coach is a recent graduate of Hillhouse high school.

Mello Fails to Recall Gorilla Jones' Ring Tactics

IN RETURN BOUT ON MONDAY

A[illegible] MELLO [illegible]

[illegible] weight king, [illegible] a peculiar [illegible] phenomena that has al[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] doesn't even remember the style adopted in the ring by Gorilla Jones, Akron mauler, whom he meets in a return bout at the Boston Garden next Monday night.

Mello's mind is a complete blank concerning his most recent contest with Jones in Madison Square Garden and he is training for this return bout as though he never saw Jones in action.

Although such things have been known in the boxing game, they are not very common and according to physicians' opinions, Mello's condition was caused by a wicked punch that struck him behind the ear in the second round of the New York bout. Yet this blow did not send the Lowell boy to the mat. It wasn't until the third round that he was knocked down and he went down again in the eighth to escape a knockout defeat, when the bell came to his rescue.

From the second round until the ninth, Mello admits that he does not remember a thing that happened in that bout. He doesn't even remember that he was on the floor, although he does remember that what fighting was done he got the worst of it.

FIGHTERS' minds become blank often times in fiction, but seldom does it occur in the regular course of the profession, and Mello has been the victim of a condition that few in the boxing game are acquainted with. Yet he is physically perfect today. Following the recent bout with Gorilla Jones, which resulted in a stunning defeat for the Lowell boy, Mello was examined (as well) Knees by physician the next day and was given a perfect bill of health. According to the physician, Mello's faculties were stunned only for the time being.

Bobby Goldman, manager of the local welterweight champion, was of the opinion that Mello was having a little fun when he said that he could not remember the events that led up to his defeat, but it soon became a serious matter and Goldman was not satisfied until he had the fighter examined by a physician.

All of which indicates that Jones probably is the most vicious puncher in welterweight ranks today and, as his appearance in the Hub will mark his first showing in this city, it is expected that the Garden will be filled to capacity, for there is nothing that attracts the fans like a knockout puncher and, in less than a year, Jones has set up one of the most brilliant punching records of any figure in the ring today. Although he has participated in only 30 bouts, already he has scored 16 knockouts and every outstanding contender for the welterweight crown has gracefully sidestepped bouts with him.

JONES continues to rule the favorite in the early betting on the fight. They are still offering odds of 10 to 7 on the Akron negro, who knocked Mello out of a like fight by his victory over him in their New York bout.

The Gorilla is due to arrive in the Hub tomorrow, and arrangements have been made for him to train at Charley Craddock's Hanover st. gym. Mello is working at Jim Toland's gymnasium and is expected to enter the ring in his best condition

One of the finest preliminary cards of the season will support this welterweight gem, and with popular prices from $1 to $4.40 prevailing for this show, it is expected that one of the greatest throngs of the season will turn out. Fans are advised to obtain their tickets early at the Boston Garden, Capitol 3200.

When Sonny Retained — World's Mat Crown

Marin Plestina, wrestling "trust buster," almost had Gus Sonnenberg when he clamped a vicious headlock on the champion. Sonny went to the floor and eventually squirmed out of the hold. Just before the second fall was accomplished a flying tackle by Gus carried both men out of the ring.

Sonny Upsets Trust Buster of Mat

By JACK CONWAY

GUS SONNENBERG smashed the Trust Buster.

Marin Plestina, after years spent in hounding world's heavyweight wrestling champions, received his big opportunity against Dartmouth's favorite son at the New Boston Arena. And he failed.

Sonnenberg won the first fall in 45m. with a flying tackle, and the second in 20m. as with another flying tackle

It was one of the most sensational mat contests ever held in New England. It had the crowd of 6000 fans in an uproar.

The spectators saw Sonnenberg at his best. During the first part of the battle the champion was fighting with his head against the wall. The giant Plestina kept forcing the issue and it looked as though the title was going to change hands

Jack Conway

Plestina time and again forced Sonnenberg to save himself by crawling under the ropes. Marin used his famous rabbit punch several times, but he did the most damage when he applied toe holds.

Dynamite winced under the deadly toe hold. Once when he broke away from a toe hold he staggered to a neutral corner and then got under the ropes to give himself time to recuperate.

Plestina also jolted the champion with severe smashes under his chin. They sent Sonny reeling around and almost paved the way for the challenger to win the title.

PLESTINA was cool a. ice as he attacked. There was something deadly and deliberate in the way he moved forward Sonny's superior speed was the only thing that saved him from going down to defeat.

In the early stages of the contest, Plestina sidestepped several of the champion's attempts to score with a flying tackle. As the match wore on and Plestina became tired he wasn't so successful in getting out of the way of the titleholder's flying tackle.

The champion also realised that he could not beat Plestina at close quarters on account of the latter's great strength. So he started a series of flying tackles. He tipped Plestina over with four tackles in a row and pinned him with the fifth one.

The crowd went wild and hundreds of hats went flying through the air.

SONNY was the aggressor when wrestling was resumed. He forced Plestina back under a series of terrific rushes. He then counted with his flying tackle. His arms fastened around Plestina's knees The giant reeled back against the ropes and went crashing through them. Sonny sung to his opponent, and they both landed on the floor with the champion on top of his rival Dynamite got back into the ring without any delay, but it was five minutes before Plestina was able to resume hostilities. He was quickly tossed for the deciding fall.

DAN KOLOFF, Balkan Lion, defeated Stanley Pinto of Chicago in 14m. 20s. with a reverse crotch and leg hold.

Freddy Meyers and Farmer George McLeod went 20 minutes to a draw, as did Wladek Zbyszko and John Spellman. Jack Wagner defeated Andy Brown in 15m 20s. Jack Ganson and Charley Hansen went to a draw in 20 minutes.

IOWA WANTS TO GET BACK

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—The athletic council of the University of Iowa, expelled from the organization for violation of rules concerning the awarding of athletics, last night wired Prof. G. A. Goodenough of the University of Illinois, chairman of the faculty committee of the Big Ten conference, that it had requested President Walter Jessup to ask reconsideration of the drastic ruling.

The resolution to request the president to ask a hearing followed a lengthy conference with Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten athletic commissioner, who went to Iowa City to aid in unraveling the tangled situation here. Griffith indicated that the basis of the charge upon which Iowa was expelled, was the existence of a slush fund for the maintenance of athletics and not a question of recruiting.

Prof Goodenough said he could not call a meeting of his committee until he had received a formal request from President Jessup ,and until he had sounded out his colleagues, but indicated the latter would be favorable and that such a meeting would be held soon. Goodenough said he would communicate with other members of the committee today and would call a special session if instructed by them.

The Illinois representative on the committee also declared that a special committee appointed to investigate evidence of violations on the part of other Big Ten schools had no specific cases on hand, but was looking into the affairs of each school generally

McTigue Through; Is 45 Years Old

New York, May 29 (AP)—The mystery of Michael "Methusaleh" McTigue's age, one of the famous dark secrets of the ring, was explained today when the ancient one formally hung up his gloves and retired from the nose-nudging industry.

In a letter thanking sports writers for the "kind things" said about him during his long career the slightly bald and wrinkled father of a large family declared that he was retiring "in comfortable circumstances," following his "two-round knockout last night by George Hoffman, a comparative heavyweight novice

At the end of the letter the venerable Michael, who for years had set his age at 28, wrote: "On the 26th day of November, 1929, Michael Francis McTigue will be just 45 years of age."

Government to Run Mandell-Kaplan Go

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—Promoter Jim Mullen today will occupy virtually the role of a spectator in the handling of his boxing card Friday night, which will be headlined by a meeting between Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, and Louis "Kid" Kaplan, former featherweight titleholder.

Two internal revenue collectors appeared yesterday at Mullen's ticket office armed with distraint warrants in an effort to collect $44,000, said to be due the government for Mullen's last four shows. They assumed charge of all money from ticket sales and announced they would continue to man the ticket office.

CURTAILMENT OF OIL OUTPUT FAVORED

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

With curtailment of oil output favored for various reasons by the great majority of leaders, the movement to bring it about proceeds slowly. Followers of the oil shares have been disappointed in their action marketwise, and their chief solace today is that their holdings are in what is termed a good technical position. Edwin B Reeser, president of the American Petroleum Institute, also associated with Barnsdell, paid a "mystery" visit to President Hoover yesterday. Both are in favor of conservation.

in yesterday's rally. Mark L. Requa will preside as chairman of the oil conference to be held at Colorado Springs June 10th, Secretary Wilbur announces. Wilbur also will attend. He said the conference will include officials of Federal Oil Conservation Board, officials of various oil producing states and representatives of the petroleum industry.

Notice that the American Ice Co., of which Boston Ice Co. is a subsidiary, had the largest earnings last month ever reached for any April. This represented no sudden spurt, since the company showed record earnings last year. The president of American Ice is Charles C. Small, a Maine boy, who learned the business from the rear end of an ice wagon, when the vehicles of this type were all horse-drawn.

Arthur Curtiss James, largest individual holder of railroad securities in the world, well known summer resident of Newport, R. I., is pessimistic regarding the emergency grain rate reduction. Mr. James declares the rate cuts will help no one but Europe, as the move will simply give Europeans cheaper wheat. "It is hard to beat the law of supply and demand in such a situation," Mr. James said. He expresses himself as "a little worried" over the general business outlook, but said the Northwest is in no worse condition than other sections of the country. California and the West, Mr. James feels, would be greatly benefited if the Commerce Commission should permit the proposed entry of Great Northern into Southern California by extension from Klamath Falls, Ore., to connect with Western Pacific at Paxton, Calif.

Brookmire Forecaster disagrees with the pessimists who are talking a recession in business. It says: "All told, there can be said to be little convincing evidence of actual recession in business activity to date. The course to be followed in the next several weeks will depend to no little degree on the weather as affecting retail trade and automobile deliveries. The balance of probabilities at present seems to favor a gradual recession during the balance of the second quarter and well into the third. There is, of course, a possibility that the confidence engendered since the first of the year might carry us over the period of summer dullness into the active fall season. An unusually favorable combination of weather and crop conditions would be required for such an outcome."

"The money situation continues prominent in current discussions. The position of both Reserve and Member Banks has improved somewhat in recent weeks. [illegible] of Member Banks declined some $47,000,000 last week to $[illegible] remaining about $1[illegible] more than a year ago. The gold reserves have increased to $[illegible], being $197,000,000 higher than last year and the Federal Reserve ratio has risen to 75 per cent against less than 70 per cent a year ago. These conditions naturally suggest somewhat easier money rates, which would probably be realized were it not for the unusually large mid-year demands to be met this summer. The exceptionally heavy issues of stock rights by numerous companies, the very large interest and dividend payments at mid-year and the income tax settlements on June 15 will cause stringency in the call money market which will react on all money rates. Consequently, little or no decline in rates can be expected before July 15. The strong position of the Federal Reserve Banks, however, suggests possible modification of the restrictive policy of the Reserve [illegible]d if anything in the nature of [illegible]ess reaction develops. This [illegible] natural course of events [illegible] prevent such reaction from [illegible]ng into serious depression."

Mumford says:

"This change in par value of shares if acted favorably upon, will be effective as of July 2, at which time the holder of one old share will become automatically the owners of four new shares of a par value of $25 each. Holders of four shares of the new $25 par value stock will be entitled to subscribe for one share of the increased capitalization of 66,000 shares at $62.50 a share, the balance that will then remain not subscribed for amounting to 2500 shares to be, with the assent of the stockholders, sold to the junior officers and employes upon such terms and provisions as directors may prescribe. All subscriptions of stockholders to additional shares will be payable in full not later than Friday, August 2, at $62.50 per share, and the new shares so subscribed for will become entitled to all dividends declared after July 1, 1929."

Steel Outlook for June Is Found Good

Mid-western independent steel companies enter June with heavy back logs insuring the maintenance of high operations through the month, especially in flat-rolled steels. During May there has been a decrease in unfilled tonnages in strips and sheet steel due to high production rate and some slackening in buying. However, the principal effect of this condition has been to enable mills to give earlier deliveries than was heretofore possible. In full finished sheets the leading producers in this area will have a substantial carry-over into the third quarter.

Steel Employes to Pay $165 a Share

The finance committee of United States Steel voted to offer to employes under the regular employes' stock subscription plan for the year 1929 common stock, not to exceed 100,000 shares, at $165 a share. All other terms and conditions are the same as heretofore. U. S. Steel opened today at $167.13.

RAILROADS AND UTILITIES ARE HIGHER

Railroads and utilities ruled higher in pre-holiday Wall Street trading today. Central Railroad of New Jersey moved up spectacularly to 324 for a $19 a share jump.

The long-awaited rise in the railroad stocks was the feature of a fairly active and steady market.

Concentration of investment and speculative buying on a score or more of the rails opened up such a shortage of stock offerings in this department that prices were driven up 2 to 20 points before the demand was satisfied.

Uncertainties in the money market on the day before the holiday discouraged outside trading in the industrial stocks that have been feverishly churning up and down the price scale in the last few weeks.

Large increases in car-loadings and net incomes on the big transportation systems, combined with the constructive effects of the O'Fallon decision and the fact that the rails had not been exploited to any extent in market movements this year, made the railroad stocks particularly adaptable to trading today.

Wall Street heard that one or two of the big systems, notably Atchison, was in line for a declaration of a stock dividend.

Atchison sold up 4 points at 221. Chesapeake & Ohio was up 5¼ at 218, New York Central up over 5 at 190⅞, New Haven was up over 3 at 104.

Erie added over 3 at 73⅝. Frisco was up 4 and other representative rails up 1 to 2½ points. Buying by the investment trusts and other institutional investors was reported in good volume.

Other features of the market were the strength and activity of the utility stocks and the weakness of the farm implement stocks, based on the sweeping declines in prices of wheat and corn and the expected reduction of the farmers' buying power.

OUTSIDE LOANS TO BE FOUGHT

New York, May 29 (AP)—The New York Clearing House Association, it was learned today, is considering another effort to check the increasing volume of loans offered through banks in the call money market by corporations and others.

A special meeting of the association has been called for Friday to discuss a proposal for raising by one-half of one per cent the charge made for placing such loans. The proposed rate would be 1 per cent. It is also understood an attempt will be made to increase the minimum of the amount lent from the present $100,000 figure.

Corporate lending, under such circumstances, would be considerably less profitable to the lender. The fee was raised last September from 5 per cent of the interest received to one-half of one per cent of the principal.

London Ford Takes Up Problem of Labor

Chairman of European headquarters of Ford Co. in London has written to International Labor Office in Geneva asking for data giving comparative wage scales, costs of living and incidence of taxation in a number of European cities where Ford Co. now has or proposes to build factories. Aim, it is understood, is to establish same scale of real wages for all Ford employes, regardless of country in which they work. Great significance is seen in Ford move. Believed to represent opening step toward application in Europe of Ford principle of increasing mass purchasing power by paying relatively high wages. It seems bound to have repercussions on whole labor situation, especially if followed by General Motors and other American concerns getting around European tariffs by building or buying factories in Europe.

Gains in Price of Wheat Are Recorded

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—Wheat scored substantial gains in price here early today, helped by an unexpected upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Sellers of wheat in Chicago were much less numerous than of late. The market readily advanced with aggressive buying in evidence, largely from commission house sources. Opening at a shade decline to ⅛ gain, Chicago wheat later rose all around. Corn, oats and provisions developed strength too, with corn starting ⅛ off to ⅜ up and subsequently showing a general advance.

Copper Imports of Great Britain Off

Imports of unmanufacture copper by Great Britain during April amounted to 12,214 metric tons (2204.6 pounds) against 13,889 tons in March and 9,888 tons in February, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics. Imports of refined copper by the United States amounted to 4,366 tons in April, against 8,369 tons in March and 9,766 tons in February. Exports of refined copper from the United States aggregated 39,431 tons in April against 35,873 tons in March and 40,170 tons in February.

UNFILLED orders of Baldwin Locomotive works are now approximately 65 per cent greater than at this time a year ago.

Tank Car Profits Larger in Quarter

Profit of General American Tank Car Corporation for the quarter ended March 31 was $1,157,200 before federal taxes, against $654,900 in the same quarter of 1928, according to Pres. Elias Mayer. He said: "Unusually severe winter resulted in a lower rate of return on leased equipment of the corporation during the first quarter than it will obtain during the succeeding quarter. From present indications earnings during the remaining quarters of this year should prove considerably better than the first quarter."

ZENITH Radio Corp. reports for year ended April 30 net income of $1,109,602, after charges and federal taxes.

CONCENTRATED THINKING AID TO GROWTH

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 29.—Do you set aside one evening a week for concentrated thought on how you may further develop your business?

B. C. Forbes

One man, who started with nothing and who has built up a highly successful manufacturing business, has found from experience that this plan pays rich dividends. He gives these three suggestions for developing new markets:

1. By more concentrated thought.
2. Through faith, work, and gumption.
3. Through quality, and proper packaging.

This homely lesson on the value of thinking sank deep into his mind when a boy and has been a guidepost in his business career.

"There were about a dozen of us boys who had a fine coasting place on a nearby hill, and heavy, well-constructed bob-sled. Every day after school we made a bee-line for our sliding place.

"One day when we arrived with the usual enthusiasm and joy, we found that the owner of the hill had hauled several loads of ashes and sprinkled them over our slide. The scene that occurred will never be forgotten.

"There was much loud talking, swearing, crying, and all kinds of threats; but I noticed that three boys did not join the hullabaloo. They calmly looked the situation over and began to do some thinking. One suggested that there was another hill close by and that with just a little effort we could have another sliding place equally as good or better. Another suggested that a nearby woodshed contained some old shingles and perhaps some shovels that we could use in scraping off the ashes.

"One of the boys took command, organized the group, every boy took so much space and began to scrape the ashes off the side. Within an hour and a half or two hours we were again enjoying the sport immensely.

"Every morning, when you arrive at your desk, you discover that during the night someone dumped a load of ashes on your beautiful slide."

When you start your evening of concented thinking, begin at home, says this successful business man, J. Kindleberger of Kalamazoo. Here is an illustration of what resulted one evening from his looking around at the things in his own home.

"I first concentrated my thought on a bottle of vaseline. I asked: 'What do I use this stuff for now?' 'How many possible uses has it?' I took the bottle and walked through the house, starting in the basement. I looked at the 'A' battery of my radio, and the positive and the negative posts of this battery corrode badly, which interferes with the proper functioning of the radio. I removed the corrosion, put on some vaseline, and found this was good.

"I next applied this ointment on the bolts, nuts and valves of the water softener which were rusting badly and were hard to manipulate. I found this also was good. I next used it on my automobile standing at the back door, on both the bolts and hinges. I found this, too, was good. The doors of my furnace and the 'check' door did not work freely; after applying the vaseline I found this, too, was good.

"I took the vaseline with me to the mill next day. In our research department we had been working on a paper that would be an improvement over the paper now being used for wrapping fresh meat. We found that this commodity was quite an improvement over oils and waxes. It made a beautiful soft sheet, and the fibres of the paper did not stick to the meat. In the past two months the repeat orders that have come in for this paper show that we have developed a paper that will fill a long felt want."

Watch out for changes and try to adapt your own business so as to benefit from them. The crossword puzzle started up long-idle paper machines, to print new dictionaries. The automobile proved the door to millionairedom for any quick thinkers. The recently-born demand for colored tiles for bathrooms and kitchens has proved a gold mine for certain alert manufacturers.

After emphasizing the prime importance of quality, Mr. Kindleberger says, wittily, of packaging: "My humble opinion is that utility of the package must have first place; beauty second. Beauty may win the prospect in the evening, but without utility the divorce cometh in the morning."

• • •

Well, which evening of the week shall it be?

MIDDLEMAN IS HIT BY WHEAT DEBACLE

The weight of an excessive surplus—the same force operative in such other commodities as sugar, coal, etc.—has combined with some foolish psychology to crack the wheat market wide open and to lend new acuteness to "farm relief" clamors. The one mit[illegible]ing factor in the latter respect is that it is rather the middleman than the farmer who at the moment is hit hardest, says the Boston News Bureau editorially today.

The volume of supply from two good crops [illegible] in the making [illegible] with a domestic carryover April 1 that was 116,000,000 bushels greater than a year ago. The silly advertising and emphasizing of the excess on hand—a folly of self-depreciation in a market sense—was perpetrated by the political friends of the farmer recently when they grew bearishly eloquent about the millions of bushels of unmarketed grain.

The decline in the price of wheat that began in mid-February and has continued ever since has produced a situation the gravity of which can no longer be denied. With the May delivery selling currently at 96¾ cents and July at 100¼—in the former instance the lowest price in 15 years and in the latter the lowest since 1923—here is a fundamental development apparently almost certain to exert adverse effect on the country's general economic structure—unless, of course, some favorable turn shortly [illegible].

A[illegible]ough aff[illegible]ting the farmers primarily and most directly, dollar wheat is likely also to cast its shadow into the fertilizer and farm implement fields and to result in reduced sales of these products. In addition, the great mid-western chain groups, from whom the farmers are heavy buyers, may feel something of the burden dollar wheat imposes on farmer purchasing power.

Perhaps the present state of affairs in the wheat market can best be seen from the following table:

1929	High	Low	Dec	Current
May	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	96¼
July	136⅛	[illegible]	37	100⅛
Sept	137⅞	103⅜	34⅜	104¼

There seems to be little question that this wheat debacle is the result of huge world supplies and excellent new crop prospects. Dumping of Argentine wheat into European markets at a price with which American grain merchants could not successfully compete increased the pressure of the exportable surplus in the United States. Heavy congestion at leading grain ports further complicated the outlook. In the face of this situation the trade apparently became frightened. The present market is the outcome.

Profits of Great Store Are Larger

Net profit of The Fair, New York Stock Exchange-listed Chicago department store, for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1930, should exceed $1,800,000, or more than $4 a common share, according to Pres D. F. Kelly. He estimated sales would total at least $31,000,000.

In the preceding year net profit was $1,669,225, or $3.70 a common share and sales $28,013,875. Negotiations are under way for acquisition of additional stores, Mr Kelly said.

Jackie Coogan Soon to Star in Talkie Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—Jackie Coogan, who was such a dismal flop in vaudeville in New York, will be brought back to the screen in one of New York's most successful stage plays. His father, Jack Coogan, Sr., has acquired the screen and dialogue rights to "Courage."

There is a marvelous part for Jackie in the little boy who was so misunderstood by his brothers and sisters. This will be Master Coogan's first talkie.

The chief criticism of Jackie at the Orpheum were his recitations, which were not becoming to a youngster of his tender years.

PREPARE for a big time noise. Prepare to hear the air filled with whirring airplanes, for Fox is going to make a picture called "Air Hawk" based on a story by Llewellyn Hughes. Fox isn't going to make the mistake of using the wrong plane at the wrong time. Charles Farrell will probably have the male lead, and if he does and "Air Hawk" is as good a picture as "Wings," you can watch young Farrell's stock soar.

THESE are busy days for Carmel Myers, who is being showered by all her girl friends. Hollywood does do right by its popular brides-to-be. Carmel and Ralph Blum will be married at high noon in the new Temple B'nai Brith, with Rabbi Magnin officiating. Carmel believes in being true to her own State. She is going to spend her honeymoon in Del Monte and San Francisco.

MARY PHILBIN, who hasn't made a picture since talkies changed the topography and geography of Hollywood, has been loaned by Universal to Beacon Productions for the lead in a light love story. Mary's coming marriage to Paul Kohner is [illegible] being discussed in Hollywood. They were to be married a year or more ago, when Kohner was suddenly dispatched to Germany to represent Universal. Miss Philbin was to join him there but Universal kept her at work here. Now that he has returned there will no longer be any reason for the delay.

"BROADWAY" will have its premiere in New York at the Criterion Theater. Junior Laemmle is going on to New York for the opening. There is a rumor that Universal may be affiliated with another company.

THAT boy, Russell Gleason, stands in pretty well with his parents the Jimmy Gleasons. Of course they are not bragging about him to his face, but they are telling any of their friends who care to listen how he saved his money from the salary he got from Pathe and bought a swimming pool as a present for his father and mother. It is one of the largest swimming pools in Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Gleason, who has been making comedies with her talented husband, is writing a play with Wells Root in between times. They will have a try-out here on the coast in the spring and then, if it is a success will take it to New York.

ALL those who made up their minds that they would dance at Hoot Gibson's wedding to Ruth Elder are going to be disappointed. The romance between Hoot and Ruth is as cold as frigidaire. Ruth is giving her smiles to some one else and Hoot is seen around with one of Hollywood's most popular flappers. Hoot, by the bye, is starting his first talkie. He may go to Honolulu to make it, although he will try to do the Pendleton roundup in September for a second talkie.

MIX PICKS BEST SLOGAN; HAS 2 CHOICES

Tom Mix, the famous cowboy of motion pictures, who joined Sells-Floto circus in Boston this week, called at the office of the Boston American Lindbergh Club early this afternoon and passed on the hundreds of slogans submitted by the boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club.

Mix failed to reach a definite decision as to the best slogan written by a boy of the club. He left the office of the Lindbergh Club with two slogans in his possession, explaining that he would take these slogans back to the circus grounds with him and would make his decision tonight.

This means that the one he does select for his advertising matter with the circus for the balance of the season will win a trip with the circus for a day.

Mix's decision and the name of the winner of this free trip with the circus will be announced in Friday's Boston American.

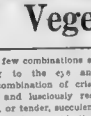
Dr. Bloch's Daily Health Hint

FRIED potatoes are not especially digestible for children. Whether they be boiled, mashed or baked they should be mealy and thoroughly cooked. The paring of baked potatoes may also be eaten. In the latter case they should be thoroughly washed with perhaps a little butter spread on.

Bacon and Spring Vegetables

THERE are few combinations so appealing to the eye and palate as a combination of crisp golden bacon and lusciously red, juicy tomatoes, or tender, succulent greens. It has been said that greens and bacon form the best spring tonics—are guaranteed to drive away spring fever.



Martha Lee

And true it is, because nature has invented these tender early greens with vitamins and minerals that have a purifying effect on the blood! Bacon, too, is rich in these life and health giving elements in particular vitamins A and B. Spinach, beet tops, Swiss chard, mustard greens and dandelions are all high in vitamins A, B and C.

The mineral content, especially iron, is noticeably high in these spring greens and, according to our finest nutritionists, this iron is also form readily available and usable by the human body.

All spring vegetables contain considerable water and a quantity of roughage or cellulose. The roughage or cellulose acts as a broom that sweeps every corner of the alimentary channel. We know how important it is to get into and sweep out the corners of our modern houses, and the refreshing feeling we have as we enter a house that has been thoroughly gone over during the spring house cleaning siege. We also know what happens if the dust of the winter months is permitted to accumulate in our homes.

Moths and destructive vermin are the result. One can actually see the damage done due to this neglect, but often one cannot see the slow damaging effect of a sluggish human system until it is too late and the person becomes ill from no seemingly definite cause. One can therefore appreciate the real value of including an abundance of greens and roughage in the spring diet.

Now I have said considerable about roughage and vitamins and minerals, but if we would be well nourished we must have included in our diet other food elements of equal importance that is why I am suggesting the happy combination of greens and bacon. Not only does the crisp brown bacon add the necessary warmth of color, but it does infinitely more—it furnishes protein required for building and building body tissue, and a most digestible form of fat, that furnishes the heat or energy necessary to keep this most intricate machine, the human body, in perfect running condition.

The cooking research department of the University of Chicago has been doing some most interesting and worth-while experimental work on the cooking of greens and as a result of their work, we have the following general method for preparation of these tender, young, spring vegetables.

Green vegetables, including spinach, vegetable tops and chard, are vegetables belonging to the cabbage family and should be cooked rapidly in enough water to prevent burning or scorching. Cook only until tender, from seven to 15 minutes.

Just before the vegetables are served, pan broil until crisp and a delicate brown, slices of bacon, serve these nutritious strips as an edible garnish and pour the dripping over the tastily seasoned greens.

Another substantial dish is ragout of bacon and string beans. I am sure you will want to have this recipe for your files. This dish is especially nice for the children's noon day meal and for a refreshing dinner after a hot day.

RAGOUT OF BACON AND STRING BEANS

1 cup diced bacon.
3 onions.
6 small potatoes
1 qt. string beans.
Salt and pepper.

Cook diced bacon in skillet, add sliced onions and string beans and cook five minutes. Add one quart boiling water and cook until beans are half done. Then add potatoes cut in halves. When potatoes and beans are done, serve in vegetable dish with gravy.

Bacon and tomatoes offer an interesting suggestion for luncheon in particular when served with mushroom sauce. Here is the recipe for

BACON AND TOMATOES

Wipe three large firm tomatoes and cut in halves crosswise. Sprinkle with a little salt, pepper and sugar and place in a pan. Arrange two or three slices of bacon on each piece of tomato and place in a hot oven or under a broiler until bacon is crisp. Remove to a hot platter.

And for a cool refreshing, yet satisfying vegetable salad that will meet nutritional requirements, I suggest,

BACON DRESSING

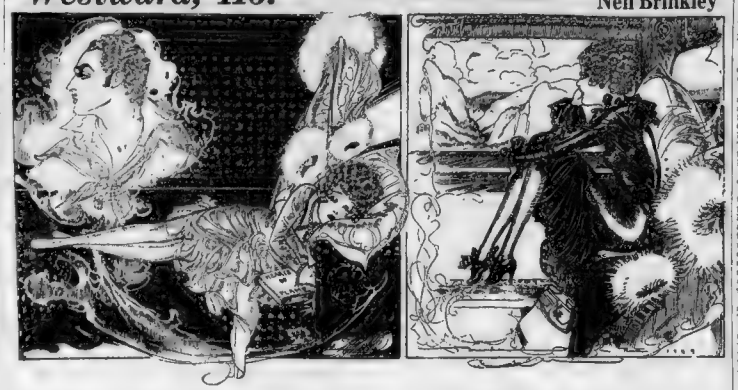
Cut six to eight slices of bacon into dice and fry until delicately browned. Drain on soft paper. Heat six tablespoons of the drippings and two tablespoons of vinegar or lemon juice. Beat the yolks of two eggs with ¼ tsp. paprika and mustard and add to the bacon fat mixture. Place over hot water and cook until mixture thickens and add diced bacon. Cool and serve as dressing.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

"Westward, Ho!"

Two Girls in a Pullman

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



THROUGH the landscape the train flies. To the walker who goes to dinner from coach to coach it seems to be the landscape that flies. He walks, the train rushes, the landscape, his tremendous country, flies. All this sharpens his wits, burnishes the metal of his brain, stirs his heart. We mean to say, he sees and thinks. Forward seven coaches to breakfast, and back. Up again seven coaches for lunch—if you are not trying to flatten instead of fatten—and back March seven coaches again for dinner, enjoyed in the blaze of a prairie sunset, the coffee drunk with the romantic purple twilight rising from the land toward the stars. And America flying by; every moment a picture left behind

All this makes some folks think. It makes them think the thoughts they thought when they were little children—well, such as: "While I'm going to beddy-bye in the North American prairie the Chinese are getting up!" Or—grown-up thoughts—well, such as, if you are a man: "Gosh, what chaps our ancestors were—THEY WALKED this—; all the wealth in the ground teen, like buried treasure, now it's on the surface to spend, all those daring fellows built. And I'M afraid to get left five miles outside a town without my gripe!" And if you are a woman: "I remember the little old woman who came across here when she was a girl, with her new husband and their old English silver, the baby she rode with on her lap and left somewhere under the buffalo-grass—somewhere,' truly, to the little mother who could never have found the place again." And if you are a girl: "Isn't it marvelous to travel! I hope I can be successful and make a lot of money in this world so I can see all the world. Who CAN that perfectly miraculous young man be?" And if a boy: "It's great to travel! I hope I'll be successful and make a heap of money in this old world so I can see all of it before I marry. Who do you suppose that fearfully pretty girl is?"

BUT! There is a young person—strange person to be young and still not be thrilled to SEE—who pulls down the shades on the train in a new country! She has never in her short life seen the desert—that strange landscape of color, tremulous air, cruelty and almost unknown history—and yet she slept and read behind dark windows all through the time the train traversed it and it fled by. She STILL has never seen it! Fine blue eyes shut tight upon Wonders of the World. We roared across splendid bridges—and far from her was the thought of the inmates of the figures that stood behind the bridge! For she didn't see it.

Five steps beyond her another girl, just as "young" looking, just as trifling of shoe and frock, sat with shades to the sky, drinking in the world of green plain, blue mountain, brown field, silver river, the boy on the platform of the village station, the brown girl driving a dusty car and leading a horse, the ranch a tiny island of green alfalfa and budded trees in the dry sea of the desert, the precious windmill whirling gaily in the center, all the world flying by.

One girl—and she had seen it all before—had Eyes and—Curiosity. The other—and the world she was going through was new—had Eyes and—Apathy.

Cultivate curiosity about the world you live in! It will make an attractive girl out of the plainest.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Contract Bidding: North with stoppers in three suits and double stoppers in two of them, assuming South to have double stoppers in Clubs, should take out South's One bid with a forcing bid of two No Trumps. Following this request for further information, South, with no long assured suit to show and no great strength in Clubs, should chance the three No Trump old.

The last two or three articles of this series have illustrated the principles governing two and three No Trump take-outs. It is important to understand that the game takeout of three No Trumps should not be made unless the three suits other than the suit bid by partner are doubly stopped. With but two suits doubly stopped and the third suit singly stopped, the take-out should be two No Trumps.

The principal advantage of this system is that a bid of two No Trumps forces additional bidding by partner, who might have a strong second suit in hand with which game might better be made than at No Trump. Whereas a bid of three No Trump, showing as it does double stoppers in all four suits, assuming the suit originally bid to be doubly stopped, will not only tend to shut out further bidding by South except for a Slam, but will also indicate a holding probably best playable at No Trump.

The Play: Regardless of East's opening, whether a Spade or Diamond, the No Trump contract can readily be made by normal play.

Friday's article will show the bidding and play of another hand.

Correct Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Beeckman will gladly answer any questions sent in by readers.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—How should one announce an engagement to relatives and friends in the East?

2—A party or dinner is correct for announcing it to one's friends, is it not?

3—What does one call her fiance's parents—Mr. and Mrs. or Mother and Dad? M. T

THE best and correct way to announce your engagement to relatives and friends who live out of town is to write notes telling them the Big News.

2—Yes, if you wish. "Telling the news" in any way you wish, except by sending formal announcements, is correct. Writing notes is enough.

3—You call your fiance's parents "Mrs." and "Mr." until you are invited to change that formal appellation for something more informal and intimate. But the request for the change to "Mother" and "Dad" must come from the parents.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Would you be so kind as to help me? I am to attend a dinner and theater party for a girl friend and two young men. I am to be the guest of honor (if I may call myself that)—would it be proper for my escort to enter the row of seats first. I next, my girl friend next, —G. F. ET ET ET ETE and then her friend? The two girls seated next each other?

J. B.

IT depends on which man is the host. If your escort is, then he would indicate to the other man that he enter the row first. Then your girl friend, then you, and last the host.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. What should a married woman's signature be on her social letters? (say that my maiden name was Mary Smith.)

2. What is the form for her visiting cards? Is Mrs. B. H. Jones correct?

3. Is it customary for a girl to select her engagement ring?

B. H. J.

FOR those letters to very close friends

DEVOTEDLY YOURS,
MARY

is correct. If the full name is to be written, it is either MARY SMITH JONES, or MARY JONES.

2. On her visiting cards, MRS. BENJAMIN HENRY JONES is correct. There should be no abbreviations.

3. This is customary now. And wise too, I think. The designs may be sent, by her fiance, to the girl's home. Or several rings may be taken to her home by the jeweler or his assistant. Or the girl may go to the jeweler's shop by her fiance. The first form is the best.

M. E. G.—Yes; a note of sympathy would be perfectly proper and very fine.

Two boys were in Sunday schoo'. Their teacher was telling them about the David, painting him as black as she could. He is just our father, something like the Santa Clause you guess."

Spectre of Becoming an Old Maid

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX,
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

"THERE are no longer old maids." This is a remark heard on all sides. Yet here is a letter from a girl who at 21, fears her day is past.

"Dear Miss Fairfax—I am 21. I am modern in every way. But by the looks of things I am doomed to be an old maid. Most of the girls in my set have steady beaus, or else are engaged or married. I guess I'll be left on the shelf. I can't seem to attract a nice man for a steady. I hold their interest only a short time, and I'm not either silly or serious with them. I'm not being invited out so often and I can see younger girls of 18 or 19 taking my place at certain parties.

"I'm busy all the time with my work, my tennis or golf, my friends and my clubs. I have plenty of things to take up my time and mind and am interested in everything. I read a great deal, from College Humor to Darwin

"I cannot leave home to make new friends because my parents ar getting old, and I am the youngest of a large family and am still the baby to them. They need me and enjoy having me around.

"I had a good time for three years, but I guess my day has passed. When it comes to going to a big ball or the theater with a man, I'm left out because I haven't one to take me now. I've had some very nice men interested in me, but as I said before, they didn't last. I suppose I lack the charm that gets them

"I have read your articles for years, and I wanted you to know my case as I feel I know you. The whole thing is, I'm not going out so often, and neither am I invited out by boys. I thank you in advance for your viewpoint

"PUZZLED."

Dear puzzled girl, where do you get the idea that the best of your youth is past? Your youth is just beginning. The two—! and thirties are wonderful.

An old maid? Not if you were forty, unless by you own attitude of mind you brand yourself as one. In these days every interesting girl has manifold interests besides men and matrimony. Like yourself, she has work, her sports, her friends, her hobbies. She is kr-^'^ vibrantly, joyously alive and interested in the great world and her own smaller world. Such a girl, if absorbed in work, a career or even a hobby, may deliberately choose not to marry or else to defer marriage. And if she does, nobody questions her motive. She does not lose popularity or standing

Many modern women marry with distinction in their forties or fifties, because they have not until that time met a man who measured up to their ideals and appealed to them. So please forget the old-maid idea and try to be modern in the best sense of the word. Marry when you love and are loved wisely—not before.

Possibly you are slightly in a rut socially just now, because you have outgrown the very young college set you used to go about with and have not yet "found yourself" with an older "crowd."

Moving into a new neighborhood might help you by introducing new faces and new viewpoints. Or try to join a "different" club of slightly older girls than your former set. Naturally you will also meet young men in that way.

A change of scene would help you. Can you not persuade those loved parents of yours to spare you for three or four months, while you visit a married sister or friends at a distance? Or take a course of study in a neighboring city. Or join a small party for a trip abroad. Try to plan a glorious vacation for next summer.

Your letter indicates you are a charming, whole-souled girl, just the kind of girl that some lucky man will adore as his wife. So do not become discouraged or let the haunting fear of being an old maid disturb your enjoyment of today.

Color Use in Beauty

By MARIA JERITZA.

DO you realize that correct use of color can tremendously affect your happiness and beauty?

Modern women are using color more and more to add to the charm and joy of life. It is safe to state there are certain colors you love they give you exquisite pleasure The chances are the color you love best is becoming to you Subconsciously that may be the reason you like it so well—it strikes a harmonizing cord with your individuality. It does not follow that your favorite color is suitable to wear on all occasions. But there is no reason why you should not express colors you love in your home background and your costumes. And if you select the most suitable tint of the most becoming and loved color, it should double the charm of your eyes, skin and hair. Besides, you will be much happier because you are expressing the real you

I saw a white-haired woman the other evening in a bright rose silk frock. The color, although unusual with white hair, seemed to belong to her and express her vivid temperament. That woman was far more attractive in a rose gown than she could have been in gray, black or any color less expressive of her own mood and individuality.

Of course, when it comes to selecting costumes for the office, shop and street, we have to compromise in the matter of color, because neutral shades, which do not direct attention from the business in hand and are not conspicuous, are in best taste. But a woman may add to her charm by substituting navy or midnight blue for black for business and street wear, if either shade happens to blend better with her eyes, skin and hair. On the other hand, black can be made marvelously becoming sometimes by the addition of a flower, ring, handbag and hat of the best loved bright color.

All colors may be divided in two classes—warm and cold. Warm colors, such as red, black, orange yellow and brown, and shades with a predominance of these colors reflect more of the sun's rays than cold colors do, hence they not only seem, but actually are warmer and are advisable for winter wear. The cold colors, best for spring and summer, are all shades of blue gray, white—the coldest color of all—and shades of violet Certain neutral shades, however, like rose beige and navy blue, are favorites the year round because they blend well with the sky, the surrounding landscape and the ground, never are restful

Why do you not express at least in your own room, the color you love best? It is a shade that will flatter and cheer you the moment you open your eyes in the morning.

A certain master of color, who has devoted a lifetime to studying the fair sex, announces that the most flattering shade to almost every woman by sunlight, north light, candle light, is shell pink that tint of modified, flame color denoting ecstacy, which the Chinese describe as "breath of dawn a never-ending drift of flower petals."

HIDDEN FIRES

by Aileen de Vilbiss

Story of Love and Mystery in Gay Honolulu

CHAPTER 15

THE days were passing quickly for Don Carlos. Stolen moments of happiness with Eugenie Nahuli; days of work with her as his inspiration.

It had crept upon them slowly this happiness of theirs. One day they had been friends; and then had come the days when they looked into each other's eyes and knew that their friendship had blossomed into the deeper understanding which happy mortals call love, and which cynics call an illusion.

It had come about while they had been seated under the shade of a lacy koa tree, high atop Mt. Tantalus, where they spent many afternoons.

As had happended many times before, their talk drifted back to themselves. Don Carlos never thought of her marriage without a feeling of revulsion—without a throb of immense pity that life can take its puppets and demand of them such tremendous sacrifices.

"But you must meet my father, Don Carlos. Then you can understand. He is the finest gentleman that God ever created.

Her voice always haunted him with its throaty intonations. Soft, mellow music in it. Where Eve's had been harsh, raucous; the voice of a fishwife shrieking.

"You worship him, almost, do you not, Eugenie?"

"He has always been so proud of me; my intelligence, and what you are pleased to call my beauty. And then—afterward—after that terrible brawl aboard his ship, when in the scuffle a man's life was lost, and the opium ring had him in its toils because his hand had fired the fatal shot, what else could I do? I was the price they demanded for silence. That—or my father's life—or liberty. But part of life's sacrifices, perhaps, in this manner, we justify our existence. And so—"

She thrust her hands forth in a helpless gesture.

"My dear! My dear! I love you so!"

What Has Happened So Far

Don Carlos Whiting goes to Hawaii after he discovers that his wife, Eve, is carrying on an affair with George Phillips, a neighbor. On landing he is accosted by David Nahuli, who offers him $3000 for delivering a black bag. He meets Eugenie, Nahuli's white wife. Phillips carries on his suit for Eve's love, but quarreling brings unhappiness. Don Carlos meets Selma Wilson, crippled mother of an unusual family which includes a daughter, Ruth. The latter plans a companionate marriage with Al Harding, much to the disgust of her father, Big Tim Wilson. Nahuli orders Don to carry the black bag again. He delivers the package and Eugenie invites him to her cottage. She tells him he has been delivering opium and warns him to evade the gang. Nahuli forced her to marry him to save her father from prison. Don Carlos spends his time working on a play. Eve has a quarrel with George Phillips.

(Now Go On With the Story.)

Their eyes met; the startled eyes of two people who have heard a confession for the first time. Only the smell of white ginger cut the silence between them there as the gentle breeze swayed the laciness of the Koa trees.

He was listening to her soft voice:

"My friend, the French have a way of saying—'Si tu as sage, profite du moment actuel.' If you art wise, profit by the present moment. That is all we can hope to have, my friend—one lovely moment of happiness. Let us be happy—for the moment—but let us not forget that my fest are set in a certain path, and I must walk in it as long as life shall last."

"No! No! It cannot be; life could not be so cruel. Now that I have found you, Eugenie—the one woman; a woman with a soul, and a body as beautiful as her soul. All my life I have sought for you. I never dreamed that I could find such understanding, such sweet sympathy, such inspiration. I'll never leave you go until I have made you mine."

He held her hands closely in his own, moved to intensity by his own words.

Her great dark eyes—those eyes black as hidden depths in pools at night—gazed into his own.

"It is so futile, my friend; so hopeless."

"Never! Romance is but beginning for us. We have had tragic lives—far more tragic than either of us can ever tell, for always between a man and a woman must lie secrets which can never be told. But now—we shall begin to live. And to think that there are minds who say that romance no longer dwells in the tropic isles. That love has burned itself out just as the craters surrounding your lovely isle lie, dark and quiet, a reminder of hidden fires. Hidden fires. Ah! That is right; hidden fires, smoldering embers, yet burning brightly beneath our pounding pulses. We shall warm them into life, my Eugenie."

And then, because a woman is always older than a man, Eugenie took his dark curly head in her arms and crooned softly to him as a mother croons to her child at night time.

Almost it seemed as though she would shield him from the hurt which she felt was in the shadows of them.

Together, they watched the sunset as it went down in the west in a blaze of glory; saw the waters around Diamond Head shimmer in the vivid light; saw the sullen red above the mountains are it disappeared in a barbaric splendor.

He walked with her to the crest; to the rambling gray bungalow which she called home, for David Nahuli provided well the comforts of life; and he, Don Carlos, thought once again of the mockery of marriage. Here was a woman who could make his life a one long glad song if love could have its way. And yet—

The irony of life! Would the time ever come when mere mortals would be able to settle their marital affairs with sanity and morality?

HALF WIVES

by Winifred Van Duzer

A SIX-DAY NOVEL

brought them goblets of fragrant wine.

"Glad you come, fair one!"

She felt as if she were sinking in the gentle light, in the pungent sweetness of the wine. "You're a darling, Eddie!"

* * *

Alan came in one day when she had the office to herself; swinging along in his ardent youth, light head high.

"Ah, the sweet one! How about it?

Quick!"

"Yes, Lanny, always You!"

"Best in all the world! Just saw Weimar—want to hear what he said? Barns is thinking of leaving. When he goes I'm to have his place."

"Oh—then"— Her heart rushed. Barns was assistant to the head of the studios. It would be an advance for Alan; in time he might become manager.

He went down the long office, walking jauntily. Out near the entrance he glanced back. It was then that Fluff sprang up and ran after him. She locked her hand on his arm and began tripping along at his side, chattering up excitedly.

They were going to visit Marie and Palmer that evening. It would be Alan's first sight of the new home and Ione was looking forward to it with eager expectancy.

On the train she said, laughing, "I see the Vine clinging your way, stalwart Lanny."

He turned to her with a glint in his eyes. "Lordy!" he said, coldly. "How you women love each other!"

"Why—but, Alan, I didn't give her the name. They call her that in the office—Eddie Bens to her face. She doesn't mind. I only was repeating"—

"Smart lot, they are! Little thing like Fluff Hartwick all by her lone and up against making a living! I should think you'd want to be nice to her, Io."

She said, through trembling lips, "I tried but she wouldn't let me."

"That's nonsense!"

She sat miserably, looking down at her hands. Their first quarrel—and over silly little Fluff Hartwick.

She cowered before the hurt, mind throbbing. He saw her look of tragedy and spoke with the stinging impatience of the man who feels himself somehow put in the wrong.

"Sane out of it, Io, for the love of goodness! The woman is nothing to me. It just didn't seem like you, saying a thing about her. She's a pathetic creature; it bothers me to see anyone so futile. She oughtn't to be working at all, matter of fact."

Palmer met them, all friendliness, beaming with pride.

They were very jolly at the dinner table. Palmer kept telling how they managed. One night he would do the dishes, while Marie dusted and made the beds and gathered up the old newspapers and emptied ash trays. The next night they would change off. Saturdays a woman came to scrub and clean up. Marie paid for that from her own salary.

"And fair enough," she explained.

Otherwise they pooled their earnings to meet grocery and meat-shop bills and installments on the house.

Very beautiful Ione thought that. She spoke of it afterword to Alan thrillingly.

He was telling her good-night, lingering till the last moment. Now he crossed his arms on her shoulders and kissed her eyes, her sweet, waiting lips.

"It is beautiful, Ione, sweet-heart. Between us—that! Not beautiful enough for you. Dearest in all the world—too dear to risk! Ione, don't mind anything! Not a great while now. How about it? Tell me,—

"I know. Oh, Lanny—I love you!"

Mid-winter settled upon Lyall, a white, bewildering presence.

Still Mr. Barns remained assistant head of the studios and still Eddie Blake was playing piano there, filling in his evenings with extra work, growing silent and rather sullen; not whispering so often to Ione as he did while now, Io. You don't mind?"

When Spring was a green mist on Lyall and Ione wore a bunch of wood violets, blue as her eyes, to the office one morning.

Marie looked up her job and was happy about it.

Excitement ran like a current under the routine of every day's work. Emma Shepherd came into the dressing room with the stealthy look of one about to impart big news.

"Have you heard, Io? Papa Weimar is going to open a branch in the building next door. Under a different name and they'll put out music he doesn't want to handle here. Some good jobs for the ones that speak first. Who do you suppose is going to manage it?"

"Well, who, Emma? You seem to know all about it."

"Only wish I did! They say Eddie Bens may be transferred."

She went to him apprehensively, stood at his side. "It's not true that you're going away? Why"—

"You'd care, Ione?" He put his hand over hers and pressed her palm down hard against the desk. "Miss me some?"

"Of course! Nothing the same—but it's not true?"

He began to talk of the office. "I'll probably supervise the new branch, but I'm not going to move. There'll be a manager appointed.

"How would like a little office of your own now? Run the publicity department all by yourself? You could bring me the knotty problems. As a regular thing you're quite capable of managing alone."

"Why do you do this for me, Eddie?"

Benz talked jauntily of the little office she would have, ignoring her confusion.

It would be next to his own, with a door between so she could S. O. S. if that became necessary. And they'd have her name on the window, all very dignified.

Tim Larabee telephoned in the morning. He asked Ione, diffidently, if she would stop on her way to work.

"Why don't you make Jenepher stay at home?" she asked his father indignantly.

"If I could get my salary up to where Jen's is I might have something to put my foot down on. As it is we don't have I to do. I'll make her do anything? And she wouldn't listen to me, anyway."

It was noon when she reached the office. Alan came in as she sat thoughtfully at her desk.

"All tied up, Frills. I'll come tonight—you'll be home? Right, then—tonight."

But it was very late when he finally came.

"I came the first moment—you should have known I'd come! Don't ever doubt my motives, Io of my heart. Well—how about it for night? Fast, now; most important—"

"I love you, dearest, darlingest Always have, always will, always do!"

"You're sure, Io? Sure forever and ever? So sure that you're willing to gamble with fate? Give up your bright and shining opportunity and your career and all you have made yourself for the sake of proving it?"

He whispered, "Ah, the darling! How soon, Io? Tomorrow? Day after? Here—forgot something—"

He fumbled at a pocket and caught her hand; she felt a ring on her third finger. A jewel, not large, set out a brave gleam in the light of the stars.

"I spose there's something back of all this, Mister Lan? My two eyes is wide open."

"It may be hard for you at first. Hard for me, seeing you going without things which I want you to have only happiness and beauty, not the rough things of life."

"But I'll have you. That's happiness and beauty. We'll live like a king and queen on forty dollars! Honest-well, I've got a secret. I've been saving a little now; enough to help with some furnishings and things. Gee, aren't I gorgeous?"

"You wouldn't do that to me, Ione! If you have money it's yours, for yourself. Not for furniture or anything else. I'll be wage-earner in my own home or I won't have one. Get it straight now for all time!"

He finished almost roughly, fingers pinching into her arms. Rather roughly, though with him, laying down the law; her senses sang with the thrill of being bossed by such fierce protectiveness.

"Of course," she laughed. "Why, of course, dear. I'll never do a thing you wouldn't like. We'll be happy—ah, you'll see!"

Tom and Janey came presently, carrying Timmy.

She said, simply, "We are going to be married soon, mother—Tom."

They were to be married as soon as Ione could get ready. "In a couple of days," Alan contended, with his widest grin.

"Indeed, sir! Might as well elope!" But the bride-to-be was all one rosy, tingling blush. She thought his impudence truly thrilling; it was a captivating thing to be wanted so.

"And I've got to give the office some notice; two weeks would be only fair."

Eddie took her to the Van Rex for lunch; sat down beside her on the bench that ran along the wall, first moving a vase of flowers from between them. "Fine," he said. "I'm an old fellow, little Io. It's young Blake, I suppose?"

"What a dear you are, Eddie! You guessed a few nights ago, didn't you? It breaks my heart to leave the job."

"Why leave then? The place is open as long as you want it."

"But you see—well, Alan wouldn't like it. It's ever so nice of you but he thinks a married woman should stay home—"

She fancied his smile a little mocking. "And what do you think?

"Oh, I expect he's right. Home is a woman's real duty, isn't it?"

"Maybe. Better think it over, my dear. We'll hold off about the little private office. You wouldn't leave soon? It's all right; I'll look after your work."

They had set the wedding day for the third week in April and Ione now wished to have such an uneventful marriage as Marie's had been.

But Jenepher interfered. "It's your bright day, Io, and it never comes again. Take all the beauty it can give or you'll regret it. Wear white satin, if you never wear it afterward. And you'll feel so much more married if it's in a church, dear."

There would be no elaborate party; only Jenepher to stand with her sister and a friend of Alan's, Spooke Hill, would come up from the city to be his best man.

The wedding in the little gray Church was over and Ione slipped up to her room.

Alan waited for her at the foot of the stairs; she ran down to him, laughing. Voices clamored; there were shouts, farewells, the sharp clatter of rice on the windows of the car.

They came, suddenly, to a wide, level space, hammered about with fire. There was a sprawling log building in the center, windows all lighted. He stopped the car and kissed her. "Like it? It's the best yet. "Like it? It's where my folks live. Think you'll be happy here?"

She was all bright exultance. "Happy—why, you can see the whole world! Oh, I love it—and you!"

Mrs. Blake kissed Alan first and called him "old fellow"; then she put her arms around Ione, holding here off for a long look before she kissed her, too.

"How pretty you are, my dear," she said. "And so much a person, Alan tells me. He always was a lucky child."

Father Blake was a courteous, reserved gentleman, much older than his wife. His welcome was kindly and sincere; he even offered a little speech that made Ione want to giggle.

They gathered with the Blake family and relatives about the table.

It was a brilliant and interesting hour. Still she felt she disgraced herself toward the end. It was when an aunt turned a sweet, high-bred smile upon her and asked her if she had liked her work.

"Indeed, I loved it. I'd have kept on but Alan didn't wish me to."

There was a shocked silence; the aunt stared. Then Mother Blake began to talk of something else, hurriedly. Alan's face was red.

Ione felt a stinging resentment. What a way to look at honest toil!

She liked her new relatives. But she was glad when the middle of the week came and Alan was driving her back to the city.

Alan had been living in a little, inexpensive hotel down the way uptown. He took his wife there now and they settled, none too comfortably, in a tiny room.

But it was only for a day or two; the very next morning they went out to look for a home.

"Any place you are I'll like," said Ione, "look here's one advertised in The Bronx, Fifty dollars. Could we pay that?"

"Oh, Lordy, what could we get for fifty dollars?"

"Let's never get in debt, Lan," ten a month for other expenses. Could we?"

So they rented it and went back around the corner to a furniture store and bought $200 worth of furnishings, agreeing to pay thirty dollars a month.

Had Lyall or Lyall for a few days. Then it was Monday and Alan went back to work and Ione began in the task of making her new home.

It was very gay, that first dinner in their new home. He told her about his job, down to the least detail, swaggering just a bit as he talked.

And she listened adoringly and asked for everybody at the office. Had he seen Papa Weimar? And what did Eddie Bens have to say? And did Emma Shepherd want to know all about everything?

It was only an afterthought that she enquired about Fluff Hartwick.

He was lighting a cigarette; he puffed slowly and whipped out the match before he answered.

"She's been sent over to the new branch," he said.

Ousting Mamma -:- A Short Story by Julia Randolph

LOIS had never known until after her marriage how cloying constant adoration could become. Roland, whom she had married, was Mamma's most beloved child, and Mamma's gracious heart had overflowed to embrace Lois in this self-same adoration.

Sometimes Lois vanished a sneaking suspicion that Mamma had bestowed upon them the gift of her warmest affections, because their home suffered Mamma more comfort and closer touch with her old friends than did the homes of her other children, even.

Fred, the eldest, for instance, had taken up farming on a large scale, and Mamma would not think of a farm. Mary, the youngest, a recent bride, departed for California, with a teary farewell kiss but no suggestion that Mamma accompany her.

Mamma was not old; in fact she was a comely little women in that graceful prime somewhere between 45 and 50. There were innumerable things she could have done rather than hoist herself upon Roland's and Lois like an old-man-of-the-sea, but Mamma was not amenable. She had determined to live comfortably and pleasantly in the home of Roland and Lois, and to that end she complimented Lois' hair, her clothes, and her cooking, and never, never criticized her even if the breakfast toast was scorched.

All this tender love and glowing admiration would seem to a casual observer to engender a charming atmosphere, but the sincere Lois was at times irked to the point of suffocation by such omnipresent fondness. It was impossible to combat succulency, and to gain thereby even the extreme relief of a thunderstorm. Lois felt sure that nothing short of an earthquake would alter Mamma's determination and oust her from their home.

Only last week she had joyfully encouraged the lovely suggestion of one of Mamma's old friends that she accompany her abroad as a companion, but Mamma had responded almost tearfully:

"No, no, I could not think of leaving you two dear children. I love you as my very own child, Lois." And there had been nothing for Lois could say. Mamma waited as if expecting Lois to embrace her with daughterly warmth, which, if he had resented in the beginning, would not have broken the ice now. So cast out, Lois make your own standard of excellence—live up to it and be too proud to be afraid.

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

Even now she was dreading the dinner party tonight, which she would have anticipated with a great deal of pleasure, if she and Roland could have shared their friends alone without Mamma's hovering cordiality.

Mamma in friendly camaraderie accompanied Lois that morning to a nearby store to do her marketing. Though Mamma heartily approved of everything Lois selected, Lois could not help feeling tense and nervous. She wished Mamma would sometimes get a free breath of air.

As they returned from the store, a little white poodle brushed between Mamma's legs, and Mamma took several staccato steps backward with a little cry.

"Oh, I hate dogs," she exclaimed with real terror.

That evening it may have been Lois's nerves, but to her the dinner table atmosphere seemed more strained then ever.

Whenever any subject was begun with which the young people were familiar, Mamma asked so many interested little questions that Lois would regret ever having opened her lips. At length they stuck to well-known topics, but the fresh spontaneity was gone.

When Muriel West lighted a cigarette, Mamma pretended not to see, but her pursesse lips were obvious as criticism would have been.

Even when they repaired to the living room for bridge, Mamma who did not play, went with them and there was a scurry to place an easy chair for her in a convenient corner. Lois' chair Mamma or Roland selected for Mamma was the chair which would have fitted in best at the bridge table.

Mama remained with them all evening, sometimes lightly dozing in her chair, but perking up at an interesting remark to make a gentle query. She joined them at the door to bid adieux to their guests.

Lois went to bed that night with a throbbing headache. She felt as if all her ideals of a cozy, companionable home with Roland were rudely shattered. Why couldn't Mama see that she would be more beloved by her children if she only came to them for occasional visits? Why couldn't she go with her friend abroad?

The next afternoon Lois stole out without Mama's knowledge and returned with a tiny white poodle, which she placed on the divan right beside Mama.

"Isn't he cute?" Lois inquired sweetly.

The poodle promptly trotted into Mama's soft lap, and that night most agreeable lady jumped up with a little shriek, dropping the yapping dog at her feet.

Mamma went up hurriedly to her room and did not return until dinner time. The poodle instantaneously reappeared in the dining room, and seemed to take peculiar delight in nibbling at Mamma's ankles during the meal. A pained and desperate look came into Mamma's eyes, and she awkwardly propped her feet on the rung of her chair.

In the next few days if Mamma ventured an inch from her room, the poodle was yapping violently at her dignified ankles. Once he squeezed into her room when the door was a tiny bit ajar, and finally Mamma had to call to Lois to aid her in getting the little dog out. Lois was rather slow in coming, and when she arrived she could not determine which was running about more frantically—Mamma or the poodle.

On the third morning Mamma announced hesitantly, but a little defiantly, that she had decided to go abroad with her friend.

Only after Mamma had been safely placed on board her steamer did Lois return the white poodle to its rightful owner, Muriel West.

About Ravages of Fear

By ELINOR GLYN

WHAT is FEAR? Fear is dread of mental, spiritual or physical punishment. It is always connected with what can come to us—not with what is actually happening to us. Fear literally destroys more happiness than any other emotion. Try, girls, to overcome fear. Fear of unpleasantness makes unhealthy honest people liars, it brings complications which can seldom be straightened out.

It is fear of losing Bob which makes Joan so often a bore; her mind is conjecturing all the excuses he can escape by, which does not leave it free to put forth charm. She has lost her self-confidence, and with it, her magnetism. Fear makes Jack accept situations his common sense could tell him won't lead to any advance.

Your whole outlook is affected by fear. Are you afraid of ANYTHING, look it straight in the face, decide what it could actually do to you, and whether or not you can prevent it. Face the worst, and call up courage—how often will probably find you have conquered, and the bad thing seldom occurs. I know a girl who felt such fear of a blustering manager in the office that she acted disloyally to her gentle employer whom she loved.

Fear makes Bella put up with odious faults in her young husband, which she could have checked at once. Fear makes Bob stand for foolish caprices in Alice

EVENING SAILS POPULAR

All aboard for that dine and dance steamer trip!

The steamer Mayflower has begun its annual season of moonlight voyaging out from Rowe's wharf every weekday evening, the Mayflower sails at 8:30 o'clock, returning to Boston at 11 p. m. Aboard are the famous Mayflower Commodores, topnotch dispensers of high class dance music. Dancing can be enjoyed, not only throughout the sail, but for an hour after the steamer has berthed on its return to her pier.

Luncheonette service begins at 8 o'clock and ends at midnight, so that all may have the dance and dine opportunity, plus the cool ocean breezes.

Free parking space is furnished patrons at Rowe's wharf beginning at 7 p. m. nightly. There is free bus service for patrons from the Gray Line bus station at Park sq. to Rowe's wharf, from 7 until 8:15 p. m.

Announcement is made that patrons of the Plymouth trips on the good ship Betty Alden are to enjoy free sight-seeing accommodations furnished by the Gray Line. The same arrangements will apply to patrons of the trips to Salem Willows on the steamer.

Ocean Steamship Co. Changes Schedule

The Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah has announced that effective June 25 all sailings from Boston will be on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, instead of Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, as they are now.

From New York, departure will be on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, after June 25, instead of the present schedule, which has sailings on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

After June 23 there will be sailings from Savannah every Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

U. S. LINES IN TICKET PACT

Montreal, May 29—Arrangements whereby ocean tickets can now be issued either on the Canadian Pacific or the United States Lines good for the return voyage on either line have now been completed.

Many United States passengers travel eastward by the St. Lawrence route in order to enjoy the advantage of two days' travel in the sheltered waters of the estuary of the river and the Gulf, but the necessity of making separate bookings when they desired to return by way of New York undoubtedly deterred many who otherwise would have started their journey via Montreal.

The removal of this obstacle is expected to effect a material increase in St. Lawrence traffic in both directions, as it is now possible to book outward by Canadian Pacific and homeward by the United States Lines at any Canadian Pacific office or to reverse the procedure from a United States Lines office.

Passengers will thus have a fleet of 26 ships from which to choose, including such mammoths as the Empress of Scotland, Empress of Australia, the "Duchess" liners, the Leviathan and George Washington.

Guide People With One Hand, Rob Them With Other

Now comes a group of prominent American manufacturers complaining they need a higher tariff because they cannot compete with Canadian enterprises supplied with cheap electric power by the public-owned Hydroelectric Power Commission of Ontario.

The applicant for protection is the National Sand and Gravel Association. It complains that the Canadian manufacturer gets electric power supplied him "approximately at cost."

It complains that the American manufacturers must buy power from a private power corporation operated for profit. Therefore, the brief of the Sand and Gravel Association, presented to the House committee, says, "The consequence is that the cost of power to the Ontario manufacturer is approximately sixty per cent of the cost of power to the American manufacturer."

When the Sand and Gravel Association speaks of the Canadians getting their power "approximately at cost," it must not be supposed that the public-owned Hydroelectric Power Commission is losing money. As a matter of fact, the lower Canadian rates by law are set high enough to pay all expenses of the public enterprise and supply a fund to retire its bonds within thirty years, after which time the power manufacturing and distributing plant will belong to the public free of charge.

We have long known that the domestic consumer got his electric current a good deal cheaper in Canada. The National Popular Government League recently made a compilation from official figures, proving that the average cost for household electricity in thirty-two selected cities in the United States was 7.4 cents per kilowatt-hour; in twenty-one selected Ontario cities it was 1.6 cents.

But, the power people told us, the public-owned Canadian system gives these cheap rates to citizen consumers in order to get votes. It makes up the loss by exorbitant charges on industrial users, so we were told.

How is that to be reconciled with the very real plight of American manufacturers of sand and gravel, burdened with power costs two-thirds higher than their rivals in Canada?

Another interesting fact might have been included in the brief of the distressed Americans. Because of freight charges, Ontario sand and gravel, even today when there is no tariff, can only be shipped a short distance across the American border. In this zone, American manufacturers are served by private utility corporations with Niagara Falls power, THE SAME POWER DISTRIBUTED FORTY PER CENT CHEAPER TO ONTARIO MANUFACTURERS BY THE PUBLIC-OWNED HYDROELECTRIC COMMISSION.

Heavens, what will happen if the American people hear the facts about Ontario, and learn what we could do with our own water-power resources if we retained and developed them ourselves instead of handing them over to corporations that rob us?

To distort and suppress the facts about public-owned water-power is the heart and soul of the whole Power Trust propaganda. To this end they secretly hire or bribe professors, doctors, engineers, editors, publicists and legislators to deliberately misinform schools, colleges and the general public.

To control news and editorials regarding public versus private exploitation of the people's water-powers, is the main reason for this orgy of secret newspaper buying by the power corporations.

Give the people light and they will find their own way. Give them darkness and you can guide them with one hand and pick their pockets with the other.

Britain Objects

The London Daily Chronicle says that Naval limitations proposed by Hugh Gibson, the American "observer," are "arousing violent opposition from the British Navy," and menaces Britain's Naval power.

The American people would be glad if Mr. Hoover would say to Britain concerning America's armament plans what he would say to any foreign engineer concerning Mr. Hoover's own plans for an engineering project.

If he were in charge of an engineering job, as he is in charge of the United States Government, and if a foreign engineer tried to tell him what to do, Mr. Hoover would reply, "You attend to your job and I'll attend to mine. I UNDERSTAND IT."

This country should say to Great Britain exactly what Great Britain would have said to us about Naval armaments before the war, when British money was plentiful, namely, "I intend to rule the ocean and the air. I can afford it, and THAT'S MY PLAN. You do what YOU can afford, and don't bother me."

Women and Wealth

In less than a hundred years women will own all the money in America if they keep up their speed in acquiring wealth. Such a prediction seems impossible of fulfillment, yet the forecast is called conservative by the financial statistician who advances it, and he offers some startling figures.

For instance: Forty-one per cent of the nation's wealth now is owned by women. Four out of every five dollars in the eighty-five billions of life insurance will go to women. Seventy per cent of the estates left by men go to women.

What a revolution woman has wrought! Within the present generation learned men were pondering what could be done with the so-called superfluous women of the world. Sociologists were arguing that woman's place was in the home.

Now, by cold mathematics, it is demonstrable that in a few years man may be fighting for equal rights. Close your eyes for a minute and try to think of a nation directly dominated by women! It may come to pass.

Back to Stone Age Language

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 29—Future legend mongers are likely to hark back to New York's present era as the Delicatesse Decade. The delicatessen shop was once confined almost solely to Harlem.

It was a mussy, smelly little hole in the wall, generally conducted by a Mr. Schmais, whose talk exploded like a bottle of pop.

He lived upstairs and his only rush of trade was on Sunday evening, when neighboring housewives did no cooking, but carried in cold specialties. Today there is scarcely a block in a business section without a delicatessen. After invading Broadway, they even lodged in Park ave.'s fashionable strip.

There are delicatessen millionaires and delicatessen celebrities—the word, incidentally, is German, meaning prepared foods. Such shops have not only become the Olympian high spots of night life on fashionable Madison ave., along Broadway and in the Village, but in far reaches of the Bronx.

The pioneer in the ritzy delicatessen movement is perhaps Arnold Reuben, whose two elaborate establishments are sloganed: "From a sandwich to an institution." Mr. Reuben used to be behind the counter himself, resplendent in a long white coat, slicing hams, rye loaves and doo-dading up slaw with pickles.

Today he appears at intervals in Tuxedoed elegance at the entrance of his dining rooms to greet some reigning star of stage or screen, and then bowls along to the opera in his liveried limousine. Mr. Reuben is a millionaire, a conspicuous first nighter, and noted for his Broadway charities.

Another noted delicatessener is "Dave," whose "Dave's Blue Room" on Seventh ave. is a rendezvous for people of the stage, cabaret and night clubs. Dave began his career in Greenwich Village, but acquiring a "following" decided to breast the Broadway currents and succeeded.

The swanky delicatessen today has a glistening starter out front. Windows continue to display tempting bottles and tinned goods, but that is the only old-time touch. Inside perfumes and other cosmetic luxuries are on sale and the dining rooms in the rear are haunts of the fashionable.

There is a yarn about a lady from the steerage who began in sawdust-carpeted delicatessens and progressed with them. Recently she was called upon to sing at an impromptu after theater supper in a smart delicatessen. "Fifteen years ago," she said, "I was Rebecka Weinstein, a singing waitress in a Delancey st. delicatessen. Tonight I am Mlle. Reba Wynne singing in a Madison ave. delicatessen."

A theater near Broadway next season will permit ladies to bring lap and sleeve dogs to matinees. If a pooch begins yapping, it will be taken out in the same manner of a crying child.

There were recent press panegyrics to the beauty of Maybelle Corey Gilman with news from Paris she was to wed a nobleman from Spain. One might think the former toast of Broadway had discovered some fountain of youth during her Parisian exile. Miss Gilman, indeed, shows faint traces of the puchritude once hers. She appears every Sunday night at the Ritz dinner dances in Place Vendome, but few who knew her in other days would know her now. She has a frozen expression that never changes whether Miss Gilman is saying "Delighted to meet you" or "The house is afire!"

Sunday is supposed to be a day of complete rest for theatrical folk in New York on account of the theater closing law, yet it is the busiest for most players. The majority must appear—or think they must—at the innumerable sabbatical benefits. Some appear seven or eight times during an evening. And love it.

She is a "poor butterfly" held captive in one of those cloth-touching pent houses in what are known as the Sexy Sixties. His family's blood is so blue that all of them are rather depressing. For two years they have been trying to break up the messalliance. She asks a million. "It has been worth it," she explains, "just to sit around and hear him talk about his family lineage." That is certainly worth something.

One of the latest in haberdashery surprises for men is a breakfast jacket with latticed sleeves and no collar. Height-ho and O, Fuff! Some fun, some fun!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

PRESIDENT HOOVER has just compiled a spare cabinet for emergencies.

This little cabinet is composed of 12 widely detached citizens selected with deliberate random.

They are to diagnose the present chaotic rebus which makes life and property in America a snare and a delusion.

The inquiry will take two years. In that time we are afraid that the answers will be given before the questions are asked.

The transcontinental jury will investigate local conditions from the orange-ade groves of California to the Rexy-bound shores of New York.

Most of the members of the commish are lawyers and judges of overlapping experience and intense dignity.

Once again President Hoover has forgotten to include us as a member of his official double sextettes.

Right now we can put the high-pressure finger on the trouble with America.

Too many commissions.

In addition, Americans seem to be enjoying growing pains in their disregard for law or order.

Every citizen has made himself a chemical retort for the analysation of all the corrosive sublimate of bootleg in the world.

Riots have assumed more majestic proportions in the struggle for parking space. In New York, the city of broken hearts and busted fenders, the traffic problem is reduced to this homicidal ratio:

Fifty wild trucks to every tame pedestrian and a community chorus of pain that uses an ambulance gong for a tuning fork.

Wild parties in the kindergartens of the Middle West and environs. We have promised our daughters a thousand dollars if she doesn't drink or smoke until she is six years of age.

The realization among the proletariat is that a bathtub will hold more gin than a bottle.

The blindfold cigarette test among otherwise reliable citizens who are now applying the same formula to Wall Street with marginal astigmatism.

The desire among college athletes to represent alma mater on the necking team.

The fact that the seven ages of man have been reduced to but two: First and second childhood.

Allowing immature caddies to turn the soliloquy of a bank president in a bunker.

Selling two tickets for every seat in a motion picture theater. This in itself is enough to tear down the very essence of democracy and nullify the constitution which guarantees equal rights to every citizen in the land.

And finally, the poor batting averages in the reform league. Every man steps up to the plate, but nobody gets on base.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

BREAKING off a love affair would be a far less painful thing if a man ever knew HOW to say good-by, gracefully, and a woman never KNEW when to say it.

But there is a lot more truth than humor in that old joke about a woman's long-drawn-out "good-byes."

When it comes to the parting of the ways, after love, or even after a mild flirtation, the Clinging Vine develops an awful clutch.

A woman's first thought, after a quarrel, is "How can I get him back?"—a man's is "How can I get away?"

All her goodbys are au revoirs! And her "farewell appearances" are as many and as certain as were the famous Patti's.

Somehow, a woman cannot accept finality. She cannot believe that anything so beautiful and vital as love can possibly die. She keeps on going back and trying to dig it up and perform an autopsy on it, or to bring it back to life with a pulmotor. She just can't let it ALONE.

She will tell a man "goodby, forever," tonight—and tomorrow morning she will call him up, before breakfast, to tell him that he forgot his umbrella. Or to find out if he's coming up to dinner. Or just to see if he's heartbroken about it. Or to tell him "good-by, forever," all over again.

She hangs into a parting like a bull-dog to an old shoe. And that is where she makes her fatal mistake.

If love is dead, it cannot be revived. But many a dying love would come back to life if a woman would only say GOOD-By—not au revoir—at the psychological moment. And then stick TO it!

Don't wait for love to die. When that tired look begins to creep into a man's eyes, and that bored note into his voice, go "out of his life forever"—and stay out.

A love affair that has been broken off may be resuscitated. But once love has been asphyxiated, burnt out or smothered, there is nothing to do but order the lilies with your eyes and forget it.

A man's love, like an orchid, is apt to wilt in two warm an atmosphere, and nothing will revive it and bring back its freshness so quickly as putting it on ice for a little while.

Nothing so lowers a woman's stock in a man's eyes as her weakness in "calling him back" after she has given him his conge. Nothing so bores him as to be "forgiven" when all he wanted was to be forgotten.

Don't say "good-by" unless you mean it. And then, say GOOD-BY—not Au revoir! Write "Finis" at the end with a steady hand—and don't add any postscripts!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I AM about to pay my respects to Mrs Florence Ray—bootlegger — condemned criminal now serving sentence in Fond du Lac —but withal a Regular Guy.

I don't know whether Florence's moonshine was worth much—

But her manners do her proud. And are a rebuke to a lot of females still strutting their stuff on the safe side of the bars.

Officers raided Mrs. Ray's home and found a small distillery. Whereupon a chivalrous judge asked her if her husband wouldn't appear in answer to the charge of liquor violation. Did Florence sob and quiver and pull a line about being a "helpless little woman"—and let hubby take the fall? She did NOT.

"My husband doesn't need to appear," she said. "It's all my fault. I've been making it and he told me several times to quit."

Whereupon, says I, three cheers for Florence Ray.

Maybe she's a law breaker, but as an example of gameness she's worth several thousand of these Pussyfooting Priscillas who always duck from under in a crisis.

That girl's a WOMAN.

She's acting as women were supposed to act in the face of danger or blame—as most of them would act if that silly institution of chivalry hadn't been invented.

Women were not naturally planned to get a lot of protection and exemption from males. They were provided with two perfectly good hind legs, like the rest of humanity, and they were expected to stand on them. They were endowed with as much courage as men—as much intelligence and initiative. In short, the primitive female of the species carried exactly as much wallop as a male, and everyone knew it and treated her accordingly.

Then gradually The Boys got together and decided that they could grab off a lot more privileges for themselves if they made the Missie feel that she was a Clinging Vine. And the lady fell for it. Until finally her status became a cross between that of Pekinese and a good Guernsey.

That's the truth about "chivalry"—drat it! Every time I think of the price We Girls have paid for having hats raised to us I get mad clear through.

But, thank heaven, chivalry is on the wane and we're getting down to brass tacks. Females are at last recognized and expected to act as People. Over in Russia no woman can bring a breach of promise suit. And the alimony pickings are getting slimmer and slimmer for the American bandittee.

And now comes Florence Ray, standing up straight and taking it right on the chin! Golly, I'm grateful to that girl!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

TO one this hour is brimmed with bliss and sweet with all delight, Fate's smile is here and Fortune's kiss, the world is wholly bright. Another finds it dull and dark, dreams done and plans awry; for him no ships of hope embark across the April sky. Yet, strangely, side by side they go in equal work and play; the tasks they do, the friends they know the same, through day on day. And it would almost seem, in truth, that in one mold were cast their lives' whole pattern, since from youth their ways as one have passed.

The Hearst Papers Advocate
